dir.ectory

Let's get one thing straight from the start, this column isn't my idea and as for that picture... well the less said the better. However since I'm here I'd better find something to say.

This should be the section where I sound off about the crucial issues, giving an opinionated but informed comment on the issues that matter in the PC games industry. Let's see. Are poor quality, film licensed, pirated computer games with irritating copy protection systems addictive? No.

Well that seems to have pretty well covered everything. Damn I didn't mention CD.

REVIEWS

24 Shadow Of The Comet

MORE ADVENTURES in the dark and mysterious world of H. P. Lovecraft (inspiration of the highly popular Alone In The Dark) using an update of the Eternam game engine.

28 Jordan In Flight

IS IT A BIRD? Is it a plane? No it's a sports sim that blends Michael Jordan's basketball knowledge and skill with Electronic Arts' flight sim experience.

34 X-Wing

ONE OF THE years' most eagerly awaited games finally hits the shelves complete with Tie-Fighters, Death Stars and lots of exciting whoosh noises.

38 Wacky Funsters

FOUR DECIDEDLY weird games meet on one disk. We laughed until we stopped.

40 Space Quest V

NOT SO MUCH a space odyssey more of a space oddity, the imaginatively titled sequel to Space Quest IV.

43 Ringworld

A GRAPHIC ADVENTURE based, unsurprisingly, on Larry Niven's Ringworld novels

46 Zool

CONCLUSIVE PROOF that the PC can provide top class platform action as the hero of last month's cover disk leaps into action.

52 Archer Maclean's Pool

FROM THE PROGRAMMER of the brilliant Jimmy White's Whirlwind Snooker comes a chance to play pool without lining up your 50ps along the table.

54 Battlechess 4000

IF YOU FEEL that chess is missing something in the violence department then feel no more (as it were). This is chess with an attitude.

57 Xenobots

LOTS OF ROBOTS wander round a post holocaust world and blow each other up. It's a change from the queuing at the check out in Tesco's.

60 Spear Of Destiny

THE MUCH DEMO'D sequel to Wolfenstein 3D comes blasting and bleeding it's way into the full price market. Can it hold its own in the real world?

66 Buzz Aldrin's Race Into Space

SUPER POWER conflict of a different kind. Attempt to be the first to put a man on the moon. Soon to be followed by Buzz Aldrin's Race Into The Whitehouse.

70 Veil Of Darkness

A VAMPIRE ADVENTURE to really get your teeth into. Okay so that's an obvious joke but it makes a point doesn't it? Point... vampire... ha ha, oh never mind.

BLUEPRINTS

13 Cyberspace

THE 3D RPG is blasting its way out of the sewer and into the future. Paul Lakin grabs his cyber deck and cyberpunk dictionary, before going networking

16 Strike Commander

A GAME THAT aims to combine a realistic flight model with top notch arcade action comes up against Duncan MacDonald.

74 Fields Of Glory

NOT THE PLAYING fields of Eton but the battlefield of Waterloo. Laurence Scotford, who's never seen either casts an eye over Microprose's new wargame and finds it a bit of a looker.

78 Patrician

PAUL LAKIN samples the atmosphere and more importantly the wealth of the Hanseatic via this medieval Europe trading game.

Patriot

THOSE OF YOU who still go misty eyed at the mention of Harpoon can throw away the soggy Kleenex because Games Design Workshop, the designers of that little (well not all that little) naval wargaming gem have produced a land-based game which looks to be of equal depth and challenge.

The scenario is the Gulf War arena and the scale of the game is massive. At your command you have military units ranging from air support and artillery to the PBI (poor bloody infantry).

Patriot comes with a huge weapons database and over 150 digitised pictures. More importantly for the serious wargamer the game has various difficulty levels, detailed on-line information and a two player option via modem or direct play. Wonder how many modems there are in Baghdad?

Publisher: Three Sixty/Electronic Arts.
Price: £44.99 Available: May

V For Victory: Market Garden

The third V For Victory game, Operation Market Garden throws you into the heat of the ambitious, daring but ultimately doomed attempt to seize three vital bridges behind German lines and hold them while an armoured convoy rushed towards them.

The operation is one of the great lts of military history. Using the point and click interface of previous V For Victory games Market Garden has seven scenarios and surely must be the first game to include polders. (There's a software prize for the first person to write in and tell us what a polder is.)

The previous two V For Victory games have been extremely well received, let's hope it's not (all together now) a game too far. Sorry couldn't resist it.

Publisher: Three Sixty/Electronic Arts
Price: £44.99 Available: April

Betrayal At Krondor

Based on Raymond E. Feist's Riftwar novels and full of characters, quests, and sub quests Betrayal At Krondor is the first RPG from Dynamix.

To capture the feel of a book the adventure has been divided into nine chapters each with its unique goal as well as some unique monsters and characters. For extra depth the characters are not only equipped with the usual strengths and skills, they also have secret motivations and ambitions.

All RPGs claim size. With Betrayal At Krondor the hyperbole is that to visit each location your character must complete a journey of over a million steps.

Publisher: Dynamix/Sierra Price: £44.99 Available: Now

Eye Of The Beholder III: Assault on Myth Drannor.

+ The third and final part of Eye Of The Beholder is a bigger, more beautiful version of its predecessors with a 35 creature bestiary (which will make you glad of the automatic attack function), a greater emphasis on outside scenes and a whole host of puzzles.

Your new quest, to swipe the Artefact of Divine Power from an undead lich called Achwellia, (as opposed to undead lichen) involves far more locations than the two previous outings. These locations include a forest, a mausoleum, a temple and several guilds. Eye Of The Beholder III is a noisy beast too, with 70 digitised sound effects, six fully scored music pieces and three times as many cinematic intermissions as its predecessors. The noise you can hear in the background is the mass salivating of a thousand Dungeon fans. The game will be followed up with a Clue Book though not before our very own Troubleshooters have got there first. (They cried in a rare and not entirely convincing attempt at bravado.)

Publisher: US Gold/SSI Price: tba Release Date: April

International Rugby Challenge

+ International Rugby Challenge is a sequel to Domark's Rugby World Cup and mixes management with arcade action and a whole host of tournaments and opponents. Having dabbled in team selection and a few friendlies you can take on 16 international teams in The Triple Crown, Five Nations and World Cup tournaments.

With action replay to enable you to savour the more detailed animations International Rugby Challenge should go some way to consoling England fans for the loss of the Grand Slam and Triple Crown.

Publisher: Domark Price: tba Available: April

Ultima VII: Part 2. Serpent Isle

So why isn't it called Ultima VIII? Well fans of Ultima will know that each game has a completely rewritten game engine. Not for Origin the world of slapping a new story on an old engine system. Until now. Ultima VII: The Black Gate was so highly praised that the same engine has been used again, hence the 'Part II' tag.

There are enhancements, with larger close-up portraits of the characters you meet and a full view of your own character which allows you to dress and arm him just like one of those cut out dolls that we'd all remember if we weren't such rough gruff sort of fellows. There are new terrain features too such as ice, snow and lava (hopefully not at the same time).

Ultima VII: Part 2 does not require you to own, or even be familiar with Ultima VII: Part 1, or indeed any of the Ultima games. It's a complete game in its own right. However the game does tie up many loose ends from VII/1 such as what became of Iolo's wife Gwenno or Batlin the leader of the fellowship. It will also keep fans (fanatics?) busy until Ultima VIII comes storming into action.

Publisher: Origin/Electronic Arts Price: £49.99 Available: Now

Eagle Eye Mysteries

ELECTRONIC ARTS have announced a new educational product range aimed in part at the classroom environment. First out under the EA Kids banner is Eagle Eye Mysteries™ set in a youthful detective agency in Richview (!) There are sixty cases for the young detective to solve.

Publisher: Electronic Arts Price: tba Available: Now

DISPATCHES

+++ TO START OFF IN A FAIRLY alphabetic manner Accolade are set to release a couple of interesting new products in the next few months. Protostar is a space based RPG while Blue Force should warm the truncheons of Police Quest fans since it's been written by the same team.

+++ WHILE THE WORLD HOLDS its breath waiting for Sensible Soccer to arrive from Renegade the more tactically minded might be interested to know that Domark are releasing Championship Manager '93 which is, unsurprisingly, an update of last year's game.

Further tactical challenge can be found on two new games from Impressions, Cohort 2 and Air Force Commander.

+++ HOWEVER IF YOU'RE NOT into winning wars and influencing people, if you like nothing better than a good sob to a Disney cartoon, how about Beauty And The Beast from Infogrames? Based on the award winning film, the game is described as a "family game" which usually means it's aimed at under twelves and mums. Consisting of five sub games all leading to the preparation of the feast it's not likely to sell massively to fans of Reservoir Dogs.

+++ THEY'RE MORE LIKELY TO be switched on by Armored Fist, a futuristic tank sim from Novologic/US Gold. The thirty scenarios are all based round a dust up between the US and CIS. (Really optimistic view of the future eh? Why let a change of acronym affect your scenario.)

+++ US GOLD ARE ALSO SOON to release the PC version of Delphine's acclaimed Flashback. Mind you, knowing the reputation of the weirdly French Delphine, the game may well be more than a tad late. Worth the wait mind you.

+++ AS WELL AS SENSIBLE Soccer (how many times can we mention it on a page?) Renegade are converting another of their Amiga hits Fire and Ice, a rather smart, foxy platform game.

+++ LOTS OF ACTION ON THE Virgin scene right now. Dino Dini, the man behind Kick Off 1 and 2 is working on Goal, which is (shock, horror) a footie game. The team behind Eye Of The Beholder 1 and 2 is working on Lands O'Lore which is (yet more shock, horror) an RPG. Life's full of surprises.

Pinball Dreams

There are some people (not all of them a million miles from the PC Zone office) who still hanker after simple non techie amusements in life such as pinball. For them Pinball Dreams could be a... er... dream come true.

The game has four tables: Ignition (space), Steel Wheel (wild west), Beat Box (music) and Nightmare (go on, guess), each with its own music and sound effects. Up to eight players can take part which is eight more than on the machine down our local.

Publisher: 21st Century Entertainments Price: £34.99
Available: April

The Maltese Amoeba

+ (Or, how I learned to stop worrying and love the virus.)
Some readers may have been alarmed by a virus being detected in the PKUNZIP.EXE files on the cover disks of our first issue. Don't panic. These files do not have a virus. Norton Anti-Virus (and possibly other virus scanning/killing programs) will detect the Maltese Amoeba virus on that disk.

They do have a small section of code which, coincidentally, partially matches the signature of the Maltese Amoeba virus. This section of code is not harmful.

Symantec, the manufacturers of Norton Anti-Virus, and PKWare, the manufacturers of PKUNZIP 2.0, are both aware of the problem, and both companies are preparing statements.

A phone call to either of these companies will confirm that this is the case, and that there is no danger of viral infection from PKUNZIP 2.0. Readers with registered copies of Norton Anti-Virus should contact Symantec for a patch which fixes this problem. This seems a good place to stress that all our cover disks are tested thoroughly for all known viruses.

Aces Over Europe

THERE AREN'T MANY PEOPLE who would swap a pacific location for Europe but the flight sim enthusiasts are a funny old bunch and having got their fill of the excellent Aces Of The Pacific and its data disk WWII:1946, they've been baying for a sequel. Here it is. Aces Over Europe moves the action to the colder and more crowded skies of the European theatre. Swap your Mustang for a Spitfire and gen up on your Messerschmitt identification and then it's... woops! Nearly said chocks away.

Publisher: Dynamix/Sierra Price: tba Available: April

STUNT ISLAND

Be stuntman, pilot and producer... In Hollywood anything's possible!

YOU'VE EVEN BEEN NOMINATED FOR AN OSCAR FOR BEST ACTION FILM.

The major American film studios have just signed the most unusual contract in their whole lives. They have bought an island: STUNT ISLAND, a film and aerial stunt paradise.

Created with the help of Hollywood professionals, STUNT ISLAND combines aerial simulation and film production for the first time ever. On STUNT ISLAND not only can you pilot a plane, but also film your own progress, edit and add sound to your own pictures to create breathtaking action films.

Choose aircraft from 50 models, from a First World War biplane to a Challenger shuttle, and take part in 32 missions in the great aerial stunt competition.

Create your own stunts using a library of 34 film sets and 800 props, vehicles, people and buildings, which you can direct to produce film sequences in keeping with great Hollywood classics.

So now you are an aerial acrobatics star? Then take control of 8 cameras which capture your exploits from the craziest angles ever. When you've finished shooting, move to the post-production studio to edit and add sound to your pictures with the aid of 100 different sound effects and sound tracks. 15 ready-edited films allow you to familiarise yourself with cinematic techniques.

BOOT Up!

Our prescription for a brighter day is to play our exclusive slice of Al Lowe's latest breeze

Freddy Pharkas

Howdy Pardners! You'll remember big ol' Al Lowe, the fastest joke in the West, and how he had many a saloon in fits with his tales of Larry and his Leisure suit. Well now he's back in town with a new tale and he's appearing exclusively at the PC Zone bar. So git yerself a drink 'n' a seat, and settle back to enjoy The Ballad of Freddy Pharkas, pharmacist with a gun, then git yerself down to Coarsegold and git a little action yerself.

Seems like that there little old town of Coarsegold has gone and got itself a bit of a crime problem agin, pardners. How's about you yellerbellies git up on yer hosses and mosey on down to give that there Freddy Pharkas a hand sortin' it all out.

Now you mind old Freddy, he may be jus' a little ol' pharmacist, but he's got hisself a mighty strange past. Let me jus' say he's not the sort of critter yer aim on givin' no trouble to, lest yer get yerself a dose o' aspirin where the sun don't shine.

Guess I'd better tell y'all how yer might go 'bout helpin out ol' Fred...

How yer play

To start off you should get yer posse over to the directory in which yer installed the demo, and then type SIERRA. When the main menu appears yer can select 'Play a Minigame' to git yerself some action, 'See the Ballad' to singalong with a song 'bout that there Freddy Pharkas, or 'Vamoose' if yer a real yellerbelly an yer' wants to git the hell out of town in a hurry.

If yer gits tired of singin' the ballad yer can press a key or rodent button to get back to the menu. Yer should pay attention now pardners 'cos I'm gonna tell yer that the ballad starts automatically if yer don't do anythin' for a while, even if yer halfway through a game. Yer can stop this from happenin' by callin' up the in-game menu when yer wants to pause and reflect fer a while.

At the start of the game, make sure yer pays attention to what folks tell yer so's yer know jus' what to do.

When any ol' body is speakin' to yer, yer can be a darned rude critter and press a key, mouse or joystick button to interrupt 'em. When there's somethin' goin' on that yer' have to watch, yer littl old cursor turns into a steer's head.

Otherwise yer have four courses o' action open to yer. Yer can see which action yer currently geared up to perform by takin' a peek at yer cursor. Boots are made fer walkin', Specs are used fer lookin', Hands are good fer usin' stuff and Speech Bubbles get yer talkin'. Yer use yer cursor by movin' it over the object, area or person yer int'rested in and clickin' with that there left button of yer rodent.

You can change yer cursor type by clikin' yer right button or by movin' yer cursor up to the top of yer screen to reveal a menu bar, then left clickin' on that there on the icon of the most relevance to yer current sityooashun.

Yer ought to be aware pardners that there are three other actions yer can perform from that littl ol' menu bar. Yer can change yer settings, get help on menu items and icons and check out yer score.

Sing-along-a-zone...

...with the ballad of Freddy Pharkas.

There's trouble down at the old mine.

Yer can also use a joystick if yer have one, or a keyboard if yer a poor varmint and yer can't afford a rodent or a joystick. Good luck pardners - don't go catchin' no bullets will yer now!

How to Install

To install the Freddy Pharkas demo, log onto the drive in which the disk is inserted and type INSTALL. You must specify a hard drive on which the program is to be installed. You will see a menu with a list of suggested parameters. Change any of the parameters if necessary and then select 'Accept choices and begin installation' to begin installing the files to the drive and directory you have selected. From this menu you can also view the documentation for the demo and make a boot disk. It may be necessary to do this if you have trouble running the demo because of insufficient memory.

Demo Requirements

To run this demo you will require:
286 16MHz or better (386 16MHz is recommended).
EGA or VGA.
A hard disk with at least 1.8 Mb of free space.
570K (583,000 bytes) free base RAM.
A Microsoft compatible mouse is recommended.

Take a stroll through Coarsegold.

You can look, but don't touch.

Meet interesting people (but not on this screen).

How to install the disk programs

Insert the disk into your drive and log onto that drive. Now type Install to start the installation utility. Select a hard drive to install to and then choose the configuration that best matches your machine. Select 'Accept choices and begin installation' to begin copying the files.

***** HELP! *****

If you still have problems after following the loading instructions, then please phone our Helpline number before returning your disk. Call Sam Miah on: COVER DISK HELPLINE 0274 736990

The Helpline operates between 9.00am and 4.30pm weekdays. If possible, please have your computer operating and your cover disk ready when you phone the Helpline. If your phone is not near the computer then please note down as much information about the fault as you can and have a pen and paper handy before you call.

If, having called the Helpline, you are advised that the disk needs returning, please place it in a padded envelope with a stamped, self-addressed envelope for the replacement disk, and send it to PC Zone Issue One Disk Replacements, TIB PLC, TIB House, 11 Edward Street, Bradford, BD4 7BH.

Please do not return faulty disks to PC Zone. We do not stock replacement disks, and will be unable to respond to requests for them. ☒

PC Zone and its suppliers cannot be held responsible for damage to data, disks or hardware resulting from use of these disks.

Medallion Man

LOWE MADE his name as the creator of the irrepressible Leisure Suit Larry. The Larry adventures, of which there have been five to date, were instrumental in bringing adult humour to the realm of PC games. They couldn't contrast more with the work of Sierra's other stalwarts like Roberta Williams.

Larry's appeal is that despite qualifying as the world's number one nerd, he always manages to come out on top (of the situation that is). Being the wrong side of forty, hirsutely challenged, totally inept with women and about as seedy as they come is evidently a condition that many computer games players can identify with, if the growing popularity of Lowe's progeny is anything to go by. Whether this is a sad reflection on the world in general or just us computer game fanatics we'll leave the reader to decide!

Having just given the original Larry game a new leisure suit in the form of the no-typing sci interface, Lowe has decided that the world is ready for a new kind of hero. Can a frontier pharmacist really step into Larry's shoes? Play the demo and judge for yourself...

Leisure Suit Larry gets a new image thanks to the SCI interface.

(Cyber) Space Oddity

Within Cyberspace is cyberspace. Confused? You will be. This game is a Hackmaster's™ delight. Within the 'real' world of New Boston is a computer generated virtual reality. This is cyberspace and from it you can access the computer networks of every building in the city. To complete the main scenario of the game you'll need to do some network running but if you're a full blooded Hackmaster™ you'll be able to do loads. Cyberspace – your flexible friend.

WILLIAM GIBSON HAS a lot to answer for. His novel Neuromancer really started the whole cyberpunk concept and led to hundreds of rip-off novels, hundreds of badly written cyberpunk style games manuals and even a computer RPG which quite a lot of people liked. (I wasn't one of them but that's probably a mark in its favour.) Along the way the serious, tabletop RPG merchants were bound to get in on the act. And boy did they get in on it. Iron Crown Enterprises (ICE) produced a massive board game with a rule book the pages of which I am insufficiently numerate to calculate. The original game was followed up by a number of sequels/scenarios. They were all good but, like many of the more in depth RPG board games, were a tad slow, requiring you to cross reference about a million charts simply to see which finger you'd lost. There's only one answer to a problem like that so, hot on the heels of Cyberspace the board game comes Cyberspace the computer game.

Well, I say hot on its heels, in fact Empire has already spent 18 months on the game. Much of this time has been taken up with developing a new 3D system which manages to combine polygons, cones and bitmaps to produce detailed 3D graphics capable of scrolling at an alarming speed. The strengths of the system show not only in the scrolling but in small touches like being able to see through open doors into the room beyond instead of being faced with a black square.

Blueprint

Since he's completely unable to come to terms with the modern world we sent Paul Dakin into the future to cast an eye over Cyberspace.

All these icons and all I want to do is ask the way to the toilet.

NEW BOSTON – IT'S MY KINDA TOWN

For a city to house over a million inhabitants it needs to be fairly big. New Boston is certainly that, containing over one hundred thousand locations, each of which can be visited.

Movement about the city is controlled via the map which can be viewed in 3 different details. The screen shown here is only an early version, the social groups will be changed in the finished game. Which means you won't be living in a street of Gods, or Jim Davidsons for that matter. Shame.

MY GENERATION

The character you play will affect the initial scenario of Cyberspace (your medium term aim). The game comes with a pre-generated character in each of the 6 professions (Sleaze, Sneak, Net Junky, Jockey, Tech Rat and Killer). You can of course generate your own character. Cyberspace uses a refined version of the character generator system from the original board game. If you're really into individuality you can modify your character's appearance (you narcissus you) though this is the last time you'll see your face so it's a tad pointless.

The animation system was also developed specially for Cyberspace and what I saw of it was more than a little impressive. The characters in the games have bitmapped heads, for more realism and individuality, then polygon and cylinder bodies for ease and smoothness of animation.

Putting all this effort into the code not only means that the finished product should be of a very high standard but also that the framework is in place for any number of sequels. (They're no fools these guys.) Before the sequel though, comes the game itself.

Play The Game

Since part of the aim of Cyberspace is to discover the scenario, I don't want to give too much away. The action takes place in the not too distant future where power has passed from governments to huge multi-national corporations. Sounds pretty contemporary really. You've just arrived in town. Town being New Boston, a name which Empire mention with an apologetic smile. You have a friend in the city who begins to act in an increasingly secretive manner and then disappears. That's friends for you, never around when you need them.

As you search for your friend you'll be drawn into numerous sub plots which don't all need to be completed but add to the non-linear scope of the game. This is a particularly emphasised aspect of the game. You should be able to do what you want.

Cyberspace is played in real time first person perspective and the aim is to get as close as possible to virtual reality, though Empire's Rick Yapp says "I don't think VR can exist on the PC - I associate it with glasses." Still Cyberspace is not far off. The first thing you'll notice about the screen is that unlike other 3D adventures, what you see fills the whole screen, adding to the 3D effect. Control/information icons are accessed via a Head Up Display, creating a more futuristic feel.

Along your way you come across thousands of characters all of whom look different and all of whom can be interacted with. One of the new features of Cyberspace is the form dialogue takes.

Instead of selecting from a number of quote options you will simply make a positive or negative response but then use an attitude modifier to select the appropriate tone. This takes the form of a sliding scale ranging from Calm to Aggressive and from Respectful to Contemptuous. As my teachers used to say:

"Your attitude will be noted".

Violence is of course the last refuge of the incompetent so if you're anything like me you may find yourself shooting first and asking questions later. An attitude of mindless violence is not encouraged in the game. "We spent a long time creating all these people," bemoans Rick, the last thing they want is someone blowing them away. Not included in this are the security guards, who are "cannon fodder". Cyberspace is bad news for security guards.

ONE DAY IN CYBERSPACE

Walk this way to for a PC Zone stroll round the Cyberzone world. Remember these are early graphics, just used to give you an impression of the gameplay.

1 Mercedes Scott. What a dame. Name like a limo, body like an articulated lorry – but this woman could do things with a bicycle pump and a tin of spaghetti hoops that would make a grown man cry. According to the data she could be found 48th Street, so that's where I'd be headed. I hadn't had a good cry in ages.

2 I'd found the block and I'd found the floor, I'd also found trouble in the shape of a six foot lump of meat that thought it was Security. It could think what it liked as long as it didn't try to talk as well, and I didn't reckon this punk could handle more than one task at a time.

3 49. Just another number among thousands. The only thing that made this one special was that it was the number I was looking for. Everyone's gotta be special somehow. The door wanted a lick of paint. It also wanted someone to open it, and I seemed to be the only one around to do it.

4 As doors went this one made a great paper bag. My chances were very good. Those were the sort of chances I liked. With chances like those a guy could think about backing one number in roulette and retiring on the winnings. A guy could think about settling down and sharing toothpaste with the nice girl in 401 Lincoln Street. First though, he had to open these doors.

5 Not much of a room, but then this wasn't really much of a day. I'd had more fun reading last year's Vacancy ads. Nice screen on the wall. Nice if you liked watching a lot of television. Sometimes I think there must be more to life. Right then I thought there must be more to this screen.

6 Remote control by the bed. Deduce that girl watches TV in bed. Hell that's all I get to do in bed these days too.

7 I didn't need to be beaten over the head with a blackjack to realise that there was something funny about this screen. (I don't need to be beaten over the head much these days, I wish people would try to remember that.) I'd seen more action down the morgue. This needed some investigation.

8 Nice girls don't keep 'phone numbers by their bed. Especially when they don't have a phone. Something smelt strange, I should never have bought that cheap aftershave.

9 Enter the numbers and hey presto the screen pulls back to show a safe. I'm getting good at this. My chances are only okay but hell, I've got forty five minutes to spare and I'm getting the feeling that maybe this is my day.

10 So much for feelings.

NB Paul Lakin has never read Neuromancer but he has read rather too much Raymond Chandler.

Strike Commander

PUBLISHER: Origin/Electronic Arts

PRICE: £49.99

TELEPHONE: 0753 549442

OUT: Now

Texture mapped rotaty 3D bitmaps anyone? Ones that zoom in and out? And how about Gouraud shading on vast fractal landscapes? Interested? Well, you're in the right place, because Duncan MacDonald has just had a look at the 'not quite finished yet' Strike Commander, from Origin/Electronic Arts...

WING COMMANDER started it all I suppose – all this rotaty bitmap stuff – and even though it wasn't much of a 'game' as such, it was 100% clever, and certainly came into its own if you wanted to show off your PC (unless you happened to own a 1MHz valve jobbie like most people in this country did back then, but that's another story). But anyway, following hot on the heels of Wing Commander came the inevitable sequel, Wing Commander II, which was obviously even better – still not much in the way of the gameplay, but weighing in at about 200% clever. So how could Origin follow on from this? Well, it's obvious... they could either give up and go home or get cleverer still and serve up something 300% clever. They plumped for the latter. State of the art games technology akimbo.

So It's That Guru Stuff, Is It?

Yes, call it Guru if you like, or Gooorood, or get totally poncey, slip into a French accent, and say "Gyeuriéu": but it amounts to the same thing – Gouraud shading. Strike Commander is chock full of the stuff. Gouraud shading on fractal generated terrains. Look out of your aircraft cockpit, wherever you will, to the left, the right, forwards or backwards, and all you'll see is Gouraudness, stretching inexorably off, all the way to the horizon.

And This Is All Set In Space, Right?

Er... no, it's not in space. I didn't bother to mention it because I thought you might have noticed from the screenshots that Strike Commander is in fact set on Earth.

But It Might Have Been Another Planet...

Except it's not another planet... Strike Commander is most definitely set on Earth. It's a departure from the Wing Commander games, but there you go: there's precious little I can, or want, to do about it. So Strike Commander is set on Earth. But when? Where? Why? Hmmm, I think it might be time to tell you the whole 'story', as it were. Now I know this is the part nobody wants to read – and to be honest with you I can't really be bothered to write it down myself – but seeing as Strike Commander's action is apparently held together by its storyline, it may be prudent... in other words bear with me, and I'll make it as painless as poss.

- It's the year 2000.
- America's had an economic collapse.
- California's been hit by the earthquake.
- The federal government can't afford to help.
- There's a lot of bad feeling going around.

(This page, Top) Cue Mary Whitehouse Experience joke... "See that bloke in the helmet? That's you that is." (Middle) The weapons select screen. (Bottom) Banking to the right and using the planning view forces even the most cynical person would say "Blimey, it's just like I'm really there!" (Below) Not just a plane, but a plane with guru shading.

"Tread a fine line between right and wrong, profit and loss"

(This page, top) Yes, you can even look down in your cockpit and see what your knees look like. (Inset) Guru landscape, guru plane and rotating scaley bitmapped landing strip ahoy. (Above) One of the many characters you'll interact with... see if you can guess whether or not he's a goodie.

- The United States stops being 'United'.
- Twelve states become independent.
- Five other states have merged, calling themselves 'The Southern Confederate Bloc'.
- Eco terrorists seize Yosemite National Park.
- Gunfire abounds.
- A brown bear called Binky gets killed. (Actually I made that one up.)
- The IRS starts employing mercenaries to do their tax collecting for them.
- The federal government desperately attempts to regain solvency.
- The year is now 2002.
- The rot spreads.
- Leading multinational corporations meet in Stockholm.
- They declare their unaccountability to individual nation states or to representative units that engage in terrorist activities. (In other words the IRS.)
- This independence is challenged, prompting the corporations to invest in their own defensive forces.
- The year is now 2005.
- The rot has spread further.
- Full scale inter-corporation wars are commonplace.
- Everyone, everywhere, is 'tooled up'.

And that's about that. The decay of civilisation as we know it. So where do you fit into this, and who will you be playing? Well, basically you're a mercenary in an outfit known as Stern's Wildcats – second in command only to James Stern himself. You have to fly a variety of missions, hiring out your services as it were. Stern's Wildcats tread a fine line between right and wrong, profit and loss, and you must determine the viability of missions from a logistic and moral standpoint – meaning that as well as your basic flying skills, you'll find a few 'career decisions' are required too. It's all 'interactive' stuff, is Strike Commander. Interactive and with a non-linear plot. Lots of characters. Lots of things to read.

But Is It Really Interactive?

Origin have learnt from their experiences on the Wing Commander series and have tried to make sure that freedom of choice is far more apparent in this game: where Wing Commander was more of a semi-interactive 'demo', (for want of a better description) Strike Commander goes about a hundred percent better. Or so I've been told. The trouble with previewing a game is that, obviously, the project as a whole hasn't been finished. Or even if it has been finished, (which this hasn't) the separate pieces haven't yet been stuck together. What I personally saw of Strike Commander was a little bit of character conversation here, a little bit of character conversation there, some animated interleaving sequences, and quite a bit of dogfighting and flying around in one of the planes on offer. (There will eventually be two, by the way). In other words, whether or not the storyline actually grips you I simply cannot say... but next month's review will no doubt be clearing that up. However, what I do feel qualified to talk about are the graphics, and all I can say is, yes, they are fab. The best thing to suggest that you do the following...

A) Stare long and hard at one of the in-flight screenshots, the one you most like the look of.

B) Imagine how everything would move, in an ideal world like in reality for example.

C) Concentrate hard and try to visualise it. Close your eyes. Imagine. Imagine. Imagine. You're really 'there', aren't you.

D) Now add a teeny bit of jerkiness (unless you've got a 500 MHZ 486 or better). The best way to simulate jerkiness is to shake your head around violently, occasionally striking a temple against a sharp immovable object.

"Yup, this is one of those times when static graphics don't hold a dark secret"

E) Jump for joy when you realise it's still pretty excellent. Yup, this is one of those times when static graphics don't hold a dark secret – or not too much of one, given their complexity.

Arcadey Games Have Crap Flight Models...

...Or so people often think, and I know I'm guilty myself at times, but when you get right down to it, it's not always true. And guess what – the planes in Strike Commander are one of those exceptions, they really are (or the one I flew was; and I presume the other will be the same). It surprised me quite a bit actually, because I'm still smarting from the disappointment of Microprose's Harrier Jump Jet, and I'd reached the rather cynical and jaded conclusion of "oh well, if the programmers have been so busy getting all the 'clever' bits working, then they're not going to have devoted much time to anything else." But like I say, the Strike Commander aircraft surprised me. (It felt a bit like Falcon 3).

Explain To Me How "Guru" Works...

Ah, we're back to Goooooreeard Shading. Well, as far as I can make out – and I'm talking about the fractally generated landscapes here, don't even ask me about the planes – it's all to do with triangles. Yes, you can't get away from triangles I'm afraid, even when you're being really clever... but the point here is that when each triangle is really really tiny and when each vertex of each tiny triangle has its own shade level, a trick is played on the eye. The eye can't see any triangles at all in fact it thinks it's looking at a triangle free zone. Even though it's not.

Explain, Then, About Texture Mapping...

Aha. Well, a lot of the ground objects in Strike Commander (cities for instance) start life as pictures drawn in a paint package. Just flat, uninspiring pictures. With clever programming routines, however, these 'pictures' can be spun and scaled quicker than you can say "Jack Robinson" (Much quicker in fact). So what looks like a moving city underneath you is in fact an interconnected web of 'city picture blocks'. Flat as a pancake. To add depth to the effect, polygons are added to the city. Skyscraper polygons that have bitmaps spliced onto their sides and roofs, so they don't look out of place. It's all a very clever sleight of hand, but it works – given the processing power – and that's the main thing.

What Does The Scaling Program Look Like?

Er, probably something like this...

CALL F0*$$-222. {00001010001000001111}
1010 1001 1010101010100100010100100
11111111 010011010010 {1001001} 0110

(Or then again probably not. Ed).

So Has It Been Worth The Hype & The Wait?

Has Strike Commander been worth the hype and the wait? What a question: and unfortunately it's not a question I can answer with any degree of certainty. Let's put it this way though... as soon as I get my hands on a finished copy of Strike Commander I'm going straight home (no matter what I'm doing at the time). I'm going to remove anything that takes up 15 megs on my hard drive (er, apart from Stunt Island). I'm going to take the 'phone off the hook, I'm going to fill the kettle to overflowing, I'm going to turn down the lights, and I'm going to... Oh no! I forgot to buy tea bags on the way home! I'll have to go and get some before I start. While I'm down the shop I may as well get some beer too. Er... (Oh dear, he lives in a sad world all of his own I'm afraid. Ed). ☒

You wouldn't play a game without reading the instructions (Let's pretend eh?) so don't read a review without reading these pages. Our guide to how the reviewing system works. Or doesn't as the case may be.

THE SCORE

All games receive an overall mark out of 100. So by definition that's a percentage but if you want to call it "out of a hundred" then you go ahead and call it "Out of a hundred". You can even call it Oswald if you like.

As a rough guide to interpreting the scores here's the guidelines we give to reviewers. (Not that they ever read them mind you. It can be quite heartbreaking at times...)

90+ (PC Zone Classic) Highly original idea or an exceptional, near 'definitive' version of an old idea. Flawless in all departments and crammed to overflowing with long-term playability. Alternatively the software company took the reviewer to Paris for the weekend.

80-89 (PC Zone Recommended) Very well executed and strong in all/all but one department. High degree of originality.

70-79 Strong idea, well executed. Not necessarily very original, however weaknesses do not seriously impair playability and it has a reasonably long life.

60-69 Games falling into the "If you like this style of game you'll like this, if not you won't" category. Plus games strong on idea but weak on presentation or vice versa.

50-59 Seen it all before, take it or leave it. Nothing special to recommend it but not abysmal either.

40-49 Dodgy. Still playable but probably only the once.

30-39 Seriously weak in idea and execution. Not good.

20-29 The game is hopeless or the software company forgot the £50 cash bribe.

10-19 Bin jobs.

0-9 It didn't work. It crashed the PC and got jammed in the disk drive.

REAL
ZONAL

This is the bit where we try feebly to convince you that our reviewers have a life outside the PC Zone office. It's sad really.

Paul Lakin

THINGS ARE looking up for the jaded aristocrat and would-be King-in-waiting. His claim to the throne of Bulgaria took a step forward when the Bulgarian Government restored some of his old estates. "It's great" he cried "I've got 300 acres of wasteland and a lifetime's supply of potatoes."

Laurence Scotford

IT'S ALL GO for Laurence at the moment after the thrilling news that he's finally landed a major West End role. After months of auditions our budding Olivier was finally chosen to play the coveted role of Godot in a brand new production of Waiting For Godot due to start in the Spring.

Mark Burgess

AFTER THE disappointment of last month's attempt on Mars, Mark has lowered his sights somewhat by producing a Formula 1 car that doesn't run on petrol. Unfortunately it doesn't run at all but this is a "minor technical hitch." It seemed like a good idea at the time.

IN PERSPECTIVE

Often all that a review is saying is that a game is as good as that one but not quite as good as the other one. 'In Perspective' attempts to illustrate this visually by rating the game in terms of similar examples. The 'scores' given in this graph are relative to each other i.e. all examples might score highly in their own right but not against each other. Well it seemed a good idea in the pub last night. Duncan MacDonald

DUNCAN'S relationship with his PC is not getting any better. The other night they went out for a drink together to 'talk things over'. It doesn't seem to have gone well. Duncan came back to the office in tears and his PC was last seen in a wine bar with a boxer called Derek.

David McCandless

MACCA HAS been talking a completely different language recently. Ever since he started 'jamming' and 'laying down a few tracks' he's started talking wistfully of 'getting a few gigs' and 'going on the road'. At this rate he could become the country's most famous tambourinist.

Patrick McCarthy

WE DON'T SEE much of Patrick these days. As London Zoo's closure seems increasingly imminent he's taken to loitering around outside some of the cages and muttering to the keepers "Ow much do you want for the big cat?" or "Haven't you got something with bigger teeth?"

Andy Butcher

"WORDS WORDS words" muttered Andy wearily the other day. Every waking hour is taken up with writing the RPG Dictionary. Not a big book, seeing as how it starts at K then goes straight to X, but all those back to front letters and runes are playing hell with his index.

Shadow Of The Comet

Dear Reader,

You will, by now, be aware of those fateful three days and nights that I spent in the port of Illsmouth, but of what horrors I uncovered there, and how close I came to losing my sanity, you cannot begin to imagine. I have, for some days, been unable to bring myself to contemplate the events of the last few days, but now I feel compelled to tell the world what I can still scarcely believe myself – the truth about the sinister other-worldly force that is the Cthulu.

Laurence Scotford
London
May 1993

P. LOVECRAFT WAS not the greatest fiction writer the world has ever seen, far from it. But for all he might have lacked in the finer technical skills, he did have a particular gift for horror, because he was able to convey a sense of abhorrent practices and unthinkable evil without having to go into unnecessary gory detail as is the way of many modern horror writers. In fact the creatures and malevolent beings that are the mainstay of many of his works are never directly described at all, but this lack of detail in no way lessens the suspense that Lovecraft slowly but surely creates during the course of a story.

Trying to capture the essence of Lovecraft in a graphic adventure game is no mean feat, and so Hubert Chardot and the other designers and programmers at Infogrames deserve credit for coming as close as they have done with Shadow of the Comet. The storyline is typical Lovecraft. An astronomer, Lord Henry Boleskine had noticed that, during the passage of Halley's Comet, the stars over the New England town of Illsmouth had not appeared as they should. His investigations led him to discover a horrific secret that drove him mad and eventually killed him. Seventy-six years later, John Parker, a young scientist, prepares to go to Illsmouth in time for the return of Halley's Comet, and there, once and for all, to end the terrible mystery.

Out of proportion

Shadow of the Comet utilises the graphic system that was used for the interior scenes in Eternam.

All the locations look very pretty, although to be honest, it's not quite up to the standard that Lucasfilm has attained with its most recent releases. This is mainly down to the lack of sprite scaling, which makes characters look odd as they walk from the front to the back of locations and vice versa. The choice of a keyboard only control system rather than a mouse driven one may also annoy some players, but its lack of sophistication does work to the games advantage during the few places in the plot where the action becomes a little less sedate.

Where Shadow really makes its mark is in the plot. The storyline cracks along at a fair pace, and Infogrames has managed to convey the growing sense of appalling horror that pervades all of Lovecraft's work. The effect is much the same as picking up a really good novel – you are so intrigued by what might happen next that you just don't want to put it down.

Social intercourse

Like Eternam, the action is interspersed with gorgeous animations which overlay the standard view. These include close-up portraits of many of the characters as they are speaking. This helps to give the characters in the game more realism, which is welcome because character interaction plays an important part in Shadow of the Comet. Most of the characters always have something pertinent to say to you and their attitude to you changes depending on your actions. This all helps the player to become genuinely involved with what is happening in the village.

Variety is the spice of the afterlife

The puzzles are never so difficult or obscure that the game becomes frustrating, although there is enough of a challenge to prevent it from becoming little more than an interactive cartoon. There's plenty of variety too. At one point you come across a labyrinth, and for a while the game takes on more of a role-playing aspect. There are puzzles to be solved involving trigger plates on the floor and placing statues in the right locations, all culminating with a frantic chase back to the outside world.

finally, if you're thinking that Shadow of the Comet might be a bit tame when compared to Infogrames' Lovecraft inspired action game, Alone in the Dark, then be prepared to be corrected. There are many sudden shocks waiting for the unwary in this game too. Although it's not quite the best game of its type as far as the control system and graphical content is concerned, Shadow of the Comet is a real gem that deserves to be played by every fan of graphic adventures. Z

Our first encounter with the evil cult is during a trip to the woods. Don't get caught peeking though, or you're likely to end up standing in for the sacrificial lamb.

ikes! You've finally got to face your destiny. This creature may look like an overgrown slug, but let him catch you and you'll be more than slimed.

an unexpected flight gives you a brief glimpse of the village from the air.

Throughout the game the player is treated to close-up animations of important actions. Some of these are interactive, as in the case above where the magnifying glass has to be manoeuvred to light the candle.

H.P. LOVECRAFT 1889–1937

If Lovecraft's writings are strange then the man himself was even stranger. He was born, and was later to die in the Rhode Island town of Providence. His love and knowledge of the area was so great that almost all his writings were set in this locale.

That Lovecraft would become a writer was evident from an early age when, perhaps spurred on by the recent loss of his father, he began to pen short stories. His frequent bouts of illness during the formative years of his life allowed him plenty of time to devote to letting his imagination run riot.

Although his talents as a writer almost certainly developed during this period, he never really learned how to interact with other people and as a result became something of a recluse, with more concern for books and cats than for people.

Perhaps inevitably Lovecraft's marriage and attempt to begin a new life in New York was a disaster and he soon returned to Providence and remained there until his death.

Although he had not received great recognition during his life, his friends and collaborators, chief among them being August Derleth, ensured that his works were published. Today he has a cult following among fans of horror fiction that is equal only to Poe.

IN PERSPECTIVE

Dark Seed is a very similar style of adventure based on Giger's graphics, but it falls down on its weak design. Alone in the Dark will appeal if you prefer something that is action orientated.

DRAMATIS PERSONAE

They're a shady lot, the characters in this game, and you can't always be certain who is friend or foe. One very nice touch is the way that many of the central characters have been loosely based on real-life film stars. Here's a partial cast list – see how many you can spot.

Parker's host seems amiable enough to begin with, but could it be that he too has secrets to hide?

This nasty piece of work makes his animosity plain from the moment you first meet him.

The keeper of the village archives and Parker's first real ally. He can be relied on for bits of useful information.

The mayor may be rotund, but he's certainly not jolly. Try not to get on his bad side.

The young daughter of the drugstore owner. She seems too innocent to be involved in anything untoward.

The boy is not well-liked by other youths in the village. Why should this be?

A young scientout to prove the theories of Lord Boleskine concerning the mysterious appearance of the stars.

The drugstore owner is a keen photographer and anxious to help you out.

He's the very spirit of bureaucracy. You'll curse at his frequent rest breaks too.

The eccentric scientist who first investigated the Illsmouth phenomenon before going completely mad.

The surly barman is not as talkative as many of his ilk, so be prepared to buy lots of beers.

The gypsies get turfed out of the village frequently, but they are friendly people, and worth having on your side.

The evil Indian is behind the strange goings-on in the village, but how do you go about tackling him?

The amiable old man is always happy to talk if there's a drink in it.

The shopkeeper is your only source of vital supplies, so keep him sweet.

Boleskine's ancient guide has had enough of mysteries and will have nothing to do with you.

He's crippled because of an earlier encounter with evil beings, but it hasn't put him off helping you.

THE CTHULU MYTHOS

Most of Lovecraft's short stories and novels are linked by a consistent mythos which he developed over a number of years. At its centre is the mythical tome, the Necronomicon which contains details of the ancient Cthulu gods who had ruled Earth in its prehistory. It also predicts that these Great Old Ones will one day return to Earth and mankind will once more be subject to their whims. The central characters are usually embroiled in cults which seek to serve the Cthulu in return for the gift of immortality. They contact these otherworldly creature through dreams, incantations and rituals passed down from generation to generation through grimoires and word of mouth.

THEY MUST NOT BE PERMITTED TO RETURN!

FROM CRADLE TO GRAVE

Hubert Chardot first encountered the writings of Lovecraft when he was 17 and he has been a devoted fan ever since. So intrigued was he by Lovecraft's life that he felt compelled to travel to the old American town of Providence where Lovecraft spent much of his life. There at the public library and records office, a little gentle persuasion gained him access to some of Lovecraft's many letters to friends and relatives. Lovecraft was an avid letter writer and many of his missives stretched to scores of pages, so they gave Chardot a unique insight into the writer's life and philosophy.

Chardot is no stranger to scripting exciting stories either, having spent some time working in the creative department of Twentieth Century Fox in Lyons. Sometime later he went to work for another hive of creativity based in Lyons, namely Infogrames. There he infected the rest of the team with his enthusiasm for Lovecraft and work began on two games based on his writings.

The first of these was the phenomenally successful Alone in the Dark. While this game borrowed many Lovecraftian elements, the team felt that a 3D action format couldn't really do justice to the slower and more tense pace of the books. So a decision was made to reserve the official Call of the Cthulu license for the second game, which is more of a traditional graphic adventure based on an updated version of the system used in the well-received comic adventure Eternam.

Chaosium who created the original Call of the Cthulu role-playing game had originally had plans to create a computer-based version of this, but they were won over by the prospect of a more narrative graphic adventure.

Chardot has based his script on two novels, Dunwich Horror and The Shadow Over Innsmouth. Lovecraft fans can be reassured however, that even detailed knowledge of these two works will by no means lessen the pleasure of playing Shadow of the Comet.

The location graphics are all superbly drawn. What makes them even more appealing is that each location has a different set of graphics for daytime...

...and night time. Most games of this type achieve the same effect with palette switching which simply can't produce results this pretty.

Jordan In Flight

Jordan in flight

Flight sim technology in a basketball game? Andy Butcher is confused. Where are all the missiles and guns and all that other fun stuff?

HAVE NEVER BEEN very good at basketball. Admittedly this might have something to do with the fact that I'm not a skinny eight foot tall mutant and don't enjoy sports where maiming the opposition is not even legal, let alone the point. Still, I'll try anything once. For example, there was that time with the... (That's quite enough reminiscing, thank you, Ed.) But I hadn't even started yet! (Yes, that's why it was quite enough. Now get on with the review, Ed.) Oh, alright then, ruin another of my jokes then, see if I care. (You see the conditions I have to work under? Sigh.)

And so it came to be

If you didn't see the the Blueprint on Jordan last issue, a bit of background is probably in order. Jordan is the first game to use a much vaunted new system devised by the clever bods at EA which applies flight sim programming techniques to sports games, allowing full 3D movement and rectoring of the players and the playing area. This allows lots of flash things, like unlimited viewing angles, following the movement of the ball (instead of the usual fixed side-on or up-and-down views of most games) and clever replays. And as if this level of technical finery wasn't enough, they've also used cunning 'digitised video imaging' for the player sprites, so they're all full digitised images of real people. Of course there's a lot of techie stuff associated with all of this, which is no doubt amazingly intelligent, and definitely beyond me. So, Jordan has a lot of technical cleverness involved in it, but does it work, and how does it play?

Play hoops*

basketball-speak for starting a game – see how I research my subheads? (Yes. Very impressive, Ed.)

Let's deal with the graphics first. It must be said that they are well done. The screen centres on the player you're controlling, and follows him around the court, which is spun and weaved very pleasantly, and is shaded nicely. The digitised players are slightly less effective. You can recognise the different players, and they move around quite smoothly. Unfortunately their animation isn't as good. There just aren't enough frames, and the relative speeds aren't right. If you play the game on a fast machine at full speed the ball arcs through the air very nicely, but the players dribble so fast that their arm is a blur – you can almost hear Scotty screaming "Ye canna push it any harder, Jim – she's goona blow!" Even funnier is the running – the players only move their legs from the knees down, and once again, with blinding speed. It's a bit like the Roadrunner cartoons. Of course, if you slow down the game the animations look slightly less ridiculous, but then the ball moves as if it were in a slow-mo scene in a dodgy seventies film.

The inbound pass*

*basketball speak for... (Yes, okay, you've done your research. Now shut up, Ed.)

To be fair, though, the graphics are good. But there are some annoying things about the way the game plays. It can get very muddled at times with players clustered around the ball, and because of the way the point of view follows you around it can be hard to see enough of what's going on around you. You can pull the view back, but then it gets hard to see exactly which way you're facing, and so on.

Also, you can play the game in two main ways 'Tracking On' or 'Tracking Off', and the mode can be changed at any time, unless you're in the middle of a set play. With tracking off you only control Jordan, and your two team-mates are automatically computer-controlled. Of course this means that you have no way of preventing your team-mates from making nightmarish errors, and to lose through no direct fault of your own is very frustrating. So, you switch the tracking on and you have the usual 'control the player with/nearest to the ball' situation of most sports games. But this leads to other problems. As soon as you turn the tracking on the members of your team being controlled by the computer start behaving very stupidly and you can only call a set play with tracking off. Even worse, 'the select-the-player-nearest-the-ball' is very bad. You have no visual indication of which player you're controlling, and often you remain in control of someone when the ball has been moved away, nearer another of your players. This is very unusual for EA, whose console sports sims are near-legendary for their excellence at 'selecting the player nearest...' and clearly showing who you have control of.

End of game statistics

Overall, Jordan In Flight isn't bad. The new graphics system works quite well, and has a lot of potential for other sports games, the digitised sound is as good as digitised sound normally is, and despite the gameplay quirks, it is quite fun and easy to play. But, as I said earlier, there just isn't enough to it. If EA had made Jordan into a full five-on-five whole-court game (ie, proper basketball), given it about 20 to 30 teams with various levels of ability, league and tournament options, a large number of formations, tactics and set plays, and cleared up the 'select the player...' problems, I'd wholeheartedly recommend it as one of the best sports sims around. As it is, I think that they've spent so much time on the new system, the gimmicky (if clever) features and the Jordan license that the actual game was neglected to an extent. Still, if you like basketball, then it'll certainly give you a few hours of enjoyment. [Z]

IN PERSPECTIVE

Options

What would a sports sim be without its options, eh? (Easier to understand? Ed.) Well, yes, but then you'd lose some of the essential atmosphere of confusion that programmers seem to feel is so important to the genre, wouldn't you?

Jordan In Flight's options fall into four main areas. Initially you choose whether to play a one-off exhibition, start a new tournament, continue an old tournament or play around with the replay editor (one of the main gimmicky bits - nice, but not important). If you choose one of the first three, you then choose your team from the 27 players available (although Jordan always has to be in your side - probably some sort of contractual obligation needed in order to get him to put his name to the whole shebang). Then you choose various game options like quarter length, difficulty, fouls, sound and so on. Then, once you're actually playing (phew) there are many 'hot key' options to do with views, playing mode, play calling and so on.

But despite all this apparent complexity, Jordan is actually quite easy to use and get into, and most of the options are self-explanatory. Are there no end to the surprises that life can throw at you?

"... as if this level of technical finery wasn't enough, they've also used cunning digitised video imaging for the player sprites"

Tactics

The main tactic in basketball is simple and easily grasped - get the ball, run down the court to a place where there aren't any defending players, and then shoot the ball through the hoop. But, as with all sports, the Americans like to take it a bit further.

According to the manual, three-on-three half-court basketball is supposed to have "enough complexity for the offence to run a variety of plays", and the game goes on to try to prove it by containing four set plays. Whether you consider four to be a 'variety' is, I suppose, a philosophical discussion revolving around the individual's perception of semantic concepts, which I won't go into here. (Thank God, Ed.)

The four plays included can only be used in the 'tracking off' mode, where you only control Jordan himself, and most of them involve 'setting a pick' on specific defending players. My initial euphoria at this concept was slightly dampened when I discovered that it means blocking a defender and therefore allowing a team-mate to get into a good shooting position, not running at a defender whilst madly swinging 15 pounds of sharpened metal on a long wooden handle. Oh well.

Michael GEORGIA
 Stan Hoke 6'0" 180 lbs. Good shot from anywhere. Fair defender, average and.	 Ray Fimely 6'2" 175 lbs. Average shooter, great and. Very aggressive defender.
 Allen Carter 6'0" 180 lbs. Hard right shooter. Average 3P, 10 and.	 Bobby Campbell 6'0" 220 lbs. Good shot, fair defender. Average speed and low and.

Vital (?) statistics

Another thing that American sports are big on is statistics - they love 'em. So it's probably not surprising that Jordan In Flight contains a fair number. What did surprise me however, was that it wasn't completely overloaded with them, and the format of the game is such that you can easily skip them if (like me) you're really not interested. For those of you that are interested, the game gives you nice shooting percentages, points averages and all that kind of thing, either for individuals or teams, at both half-time and after the game.

Epic

Wing Commander

X-Wing

THE ARRIVAL of this game in the office was the scene of much celebration and depravity. It turns my stomach when I think of some of the horrors I've been an unwilling and surprise witness to, and it takes a lot to shock me, I can tell you (I've read 120 Days of Sodom – mind you, I was a bit bored by the time the bolt cutters came out). There was feasting, heavy quaffing of wine and even some talk of biting the heads off budgerigars to appease the great god Lukasar. I had nothing to do with all this nonsense, of course, wanting to keep a clear head so that my faculties of judgement remained unimpaired. I know my obligations to our beloved readers. (So what's all that blood around your mouth, then? A Reader) That? Oh – that's ketchup, of course. Ha ha. Bacon sandwich – I've just had a bacon sandwich.

But was the partying and the callous bloodletting misplaced? (Actually, some of the bloodletting was a little misplaced – I've been over that keyboard with a damp sponge five times now and it still looks like a slice of black pudding). To the game then. There was quite a lot about the graphical splendour of the intro and in-game sequences in the last issue, so I won't go on about them here. (If you didn't read it, buy a back-issue, git.) I'll just say here that we're not the kind of moist-lipped fops that are easily won round by a quick bit of animation and a dash of grandiose theme music at the expense of gameplay. We do like a good swooshing noise though, and X-Wing's intro sequence has these by the bucket load. (But can you dance to it? Ed.) Ahem. Anyway, the sound throughout is excellent (if you can afford the right hardware and vast tracts of memory required), and the graphics are a mixture of bitmaps and vectors that work very well.

If you're expecting a space-based version of SWOTL, X-Wing may well seem a little strange – it isn't a flight-sim, it's a shoot 'em-up, and a pretty darned good one, at that. There are no takeoff or landing skills to get to grips with, and you don't even have to sit through the cinematic linking sequences if you don't want to – just go ahead and switch them off.

You select one of the three available Tours of Duty, and are promptly given a mission to complete. If you don't succeed at the mission, you simply fly it again until you get it right unless (a) you're killed, in which case you're dead, or (b) you're captured by the Empire forces, in which case Darth Vader will apply his hard pointy metal things to your soft parts. In either case, your less-than-mercurial career is still only temporarily slowed because you can tinker with yourself in the Registry office if you want (insert your own joke here) and then continue your career with career points reset to zero. Throughout the missions there's no sense that what you're doing affects the outcome of a war and there's no multi-faceted mission-planner to play with for days – the missions are levels, pure and simple, that lead all the way to the final confrontation with the Death Star.

In fact, for a lot of the missions you scarcely do any 'flying' as such. There's no up or down, no ground to crash into and no clouds to fly through. When you're following the high-speed mazy turns of a Tie-fighter around the screen it's more like being a turret-gunner than a pilot because you don't really have a sense of forward movement – you never seem to get any nearer to the background planets and stars.

The proton torpedo just wasn't pulling his weight so we had to let him go.
(Below) Pulling into the thirtieth century's version of the Happy Eater.

The Hoover/Spin-Dryer Hybrid

Remember those little robots in Star Wars that looked like a strange cross between an upright vacuum-cleaner and a spin-dryer? They're in this. (We looked everywhere for Indiana Jones and the big bear, but we couldn't find them anywhere.) If you're flying an X- or Y-Wing, a hoover will be popped in behind you in order to provide the annoying bleeps, bleeps and farting noises that did so much to win the hearts of cinema audiences world-wide.

They'll also keep you updated on any news that might affect you, like "Eighteen Tie-fighters just appeared behind you, by the way," and "Aston Villa just scored against Chelsea." In addition, they provide you with useful info mid-battle like a zoomable map of the battle area, a reminder of what you're actually supposed to be doing there and a damage report on your craft. The A-Wing uses an on-board computer for all this, which isn't nearly as retro.

Choose your Weapons

The three types of craft you fly have different weapons available for you to fire at Tie-fighters and such-like. You can choose to have unlimited weapons if you want, but if you complete a mission successfully in Tour of Duty mode with unlimited weapons you won't be able to progress to the next one.

Depending on what you're flying, the weapons available may include laser cannons – useful for performing minor surgery; ion cannons – always handy for sorting out that wrinkly uniform; concussion missiles which you pick up and hit people over the head with; and proton torpedoes, which weight-lifters apparently swallow whole for improved muscle-bulk. They can all be configured to fire at different rates.

Show-offy types however, needn't worry. There are missions that require precision flying too, and it's very gratifying to be able to go whizzing down the inside bit of one of the larger enemy spaceships without touching the sides, perhaps utilising the 17 (count 'em) views for maximum pose value. You can even switch off your engines and coast, turning to face something as you pass, casually unloading your proton torpedoes into it.

Any reservations about the game are generated entirely by the difficulty people with common-or-garden PCs are going to have running it. It can be configured in many ways, to cope with many different setups – in fact during the installation process it gives your machine a quick total body-search and adjusts its speed accordingly. (It's pretty devastating when your pride and joy is described as slow in big capital letters.) It's fine on a 486/33 – what isn't? – but even on a 386/33 there was the odd wobble in the graphics when flying past a large spaceship at close range, and although it was playable it behaved very strangely on a 386sx/20. Some set-ups won't be able to use the digitised speech and sound, even with the right soundcard, if they don't have the memory. There's a lengthy read-me file that goes into the possibilities of all this. Imagine how pissed-off you'd be if you bought the game and then found out, through a lengthy read-me file, that you couldn't run the game at all. That sort of information should be clearly highlighted on the box.

This aside, it's really very good, and one of the most addictive action games I've played in quite a while. The speed of the dogfighting can be dizzying. Every time I see someone else playing it I want to push them out of the way and take over. It's lucky I'm such a well-raised person, and was beaten with a coffee table every time I tried anything like that as a child, or the office would be a hotbed of casual violence at the moment. Thank heavens for quality parenting. [ALL: BRIGHTLY] And thank heavens for X-Wing. [Music. Curtain.] Z

Anoraks, Shandies And Lager Tops

The main gameplaying options are chosen from within the pressurised walls of the Rebel Forces' flagship 'Independence', which, being a flagship, has more than a few doors – if it was covered in flags it would naturally be a doorship – which leads to all sorts of exotic areas.

① Pilot Training Ground – This is a series of increasingly tricky obstacle courses for you to fly through and is the sort of thing you only practice on if you don't mind being accused of being overly-in-touch with your feminine side.

② Tech Room – Anorak-wearers will head straight for this, to look at the little pretend holograms of all the craft in the game, complete with such detailed specs as fuel consumption, boot space and seat-cover materials. Unfortunately these images don't do anything exciting like revolve, or zoom in and out, or anything.

③ Historical Combat – Careful people might well like to select a historical mission, if only to confound those fools who think that all this stuff takes place in the future. The other advantage is that they consist of six tutorial missions for each of the three machines you'll be hacking about in.

⑤ Tour of Duty – Real men, the kind who don't use deodorant and are still a little doubtful about sissy soap, will go straight for this. There are three different tours of duty which cover different scenarios in the on-going battle against the evil Empire forces, and you can start in any of them (just don't come running to me when you get blown all over the galaxy as soon as you leave the spaceport in Tour III).

⑥ Registry – This is right down in the bottom-right corner, next to the condom machine, and it's where you go if you signed on as Corporal Arse as a joke and have rightly decided it isn't very funny after all. You can edit existing pilots and new ones in here.

Once every few years or so, there comes a game so different in concept, so excellent in execution and so thoroughly addictive and playable that it's impossible for a games reviewer to maintain anything like an impartial view of it. We never give that kind of stuff to Patrick McCarthy, though.

"...it takes longer to install [the] game than it does to play and get bored with it..."

WACKY FUNSTERS is humorous. You can tell this from the moment you pick it up. The heft of it in your hand, the packaging, the manual – everything about it says "Hoo, boy, am I funny! You'll probably wet your pants while you're installing this, never mind when you start playing". It even comes with a free set of incontinence knickers. There are different sub-games that more or less cover (or 'satirise') every genre of computer game – sports, driving, beat 'em-up, and so on – but unfortunately are very poor versions of each. The trouble is, while the games are crap, some of the jokes in the manual made us think that the people who wrote the game might be quite nice, so we're torn. And when you think that it's obviously only intended as a bit of a laugh, it makes you feel more kindly disposed towards it. The trouble is, if it takes longer to install a game than it does to play and get bored with it, it's not good – and considering the shareware available for less money the fact that it's only intended as 15 minutes of fun still doesn't save it.

When we originally saw the demo of Wacky Funsters it looked great, a genuinely funny piece of software. The problem is that the game never gets beyond that, an enjoyable demo. Z

Rambi vs Blambo

Rambi versus Blambo is the shooting game. This is a play on words, based on two well-known popular works from the moving picture industry. I had to choke back a tiny scream of laughter when I finally worked that one out, and my Diet Guinness shot right up my nose and onto my keyboard. Some of the keys are still a bit sticky, actually. I'm thinking of suing.

Anyway, you shoot animals of distinctly cute nature – different animals yield differing amounts of points, with Bambi providing the biggest reward. Get more than 5000 points and you progress to the next level with a better gun which has no effect at all on the shooting. Alternatively, play as a deer and spend your time shooting at poorly-dressed members of the public. That's a bit of a turn-up, isn't it, an element of role-reversal that comments poignantly on society and its – (Get on with it. Ed.)

There are only three levels, so they obviously don't want you to play it for too long. Perhaps they think you'll become obsessed with this one at the expense of the other games and miss out on a fully-rounded gaming experience. It's one of that rare breed of games that's more entertaining when you hear someone telling you about it than when you play it. It doesn't even live up to its own promise of absurdly sick violence. The things you shoot spin round like funfair targets rather than falling down dead (except for the deer, who explodes). It's not very good at all, and it's the best of the bunch. It doesn't make you want to read about the rest really, does it? Be brave.

Do deers have penises? (No. Ed.)

Roadkill

Roadkill is an into-the-screen driving game, based not, as you might expect, on the exploits of Senator Edward Kennedy, but on those of a commuter who wants to make it to the office. Being a driving game packaged within the larger concept of wackiness, the main point of the game is to run things over. Chickens, squirrels and other road hazards are all fair game, but running over "gas cans" only gives you bonus points, which is a little disappointing if you've ever done it in real life. Still, if it's virtual reality you're after, buy a full-face crash-helmet and a torch.

Despite the title, you can't just go screaming down the highway splattering everyone to a pulp – for a start your car doesn't move fast enough. Unfortunately, though, you can't even go creeping down the highway giving everyone nasty bruises on the backs of their calves. There are tedious things like debris all over the place that have to be avoided, and it's also not deemed to be a good thing if you run over highway workers or crash into fire engines and ambulances, which somehow spoils it all for me. Think how much more fun it would be if you could impede someone's progress to the hospital and then watch them die of an intestinal haemorrhage at the side of the road.

It isn't really a driving game, because you don't actually drive – all you do is choose a lane and snap from one to another. It has the same level of thrills and spills as the road-race speed-typing test in Mavis Beacon Teaches Typing without the benefit of improving your typing skills.

Ping

This game will be familiar to anyone who spent many hours in their childhood watching rich kids wrecking the tubes of their televisions by playing ping-pong, or 'electronic tennis' on it. It's a one-dimensional tennis game, allegedly with a purpose: hit the explosive balls back at the robot opponent until he explodes. Unfortunately it's just the same old tennis game, only with little hands on the ends of the highly-detailed racquets, and provides a level of gameplay that would be unacceptable on a Game'n'Watch. Still, everything else from the seventies is back in fashion – why not this?

Big Guys With Muscles

This is an attempt at a humorous beat 'em-up. Usually a number of fighting moves are available to you in a beat 'em-up, and one appealing aspect is in learning the tremendously complicated key, button and joystick combinations necessary to pull off a simple punch to the temple. (The other appealing aspect is that you can live the life of a psychopath without the inconvenience of the accompanying pain.) Your moves include 'squirt inkpen' and 'use flower punch'. These are even less funny than they sound, the fighting action is terrible and the collision detection is ropy, to boot. (Blimey, a pun. I could write the manual.)

Steroids

This is another game that will seem familiar, being loosely based on that old pub, arcade and hospice favourite, Asteroids, only without the pools of beer on the screen, the crisps in the controls, and the playability. Dodge the steroids, which will otherwise cause your body to swell, your blood pressure to rise and your testicles to shrink, and pick up the protein molecules, which won't. Needless to say (if you've read any of the other bits of this review) it's not very good. If you came straight to this bit and haven't had your expectations lowered yet, go away and work on your reading discipline.

Space Quest V:

SHIELDS UP! BATTLE STATIONS!
LOCK WEAPONS!

In a valiant attempt not to fill an intro with overused film references, Paul Presley uses the force (damn!) to go where four games have gone before (do'oh!) and see whether in space anyone can hear you laugh (that's it, I'm outta here).

Better than your average flight simulator.

Mr. Cadbury's Parrot is finally blasted into deep space.

HERE'S SOMETHING ABOUT Space Quest V that makes it different to all the other Sierra games of late, but I can't quite put my finger on what it is. Let's see, the graphics? No, they're just the same old nicely drawn backgrounds coupled with standard sprites and clumsy animation routines. The sound? Nope, just more of the usual mid to high quality musical scores and sampled sound effects (most of which in this case are sampled from old Star Trek episodes). Maybe it's the price and non-demanding hardware specifications. £39.99 and it needs more memory than a zoo full of elephants. Hmm, maybe not. Ah, I know. It's actually pretty good fun to play. That's it, I don't know how I could have overlooked it.

Yes, as unbelievable as it sounds, Sierra has actually produced an adventure that is halfway decent for a change. You think I'm being too sarcastic here? Well, let's take a look at some of its more recent titles. King's Quest VI – nice enough but with very little atmosphere and none too demanding puzzles. Space Quest IV – a very poor storyline that was also way too short. Before you knew what was going on, the game was over.

Leisure Suit Larry V – the less said the better. I would go on but we're only bringing out one magazine this month.

So it's good then?

Good, yes, but I wouldn't go so far as to say it's brilliant. It's certainly not the best I've ever seen from Sierra, but it's a lot better than what we've had to put up with of late. To be honest, of all the Quest titles, the Space Quest series has probably been the strongest when it comes to entertainment. Even SQIV, with all of its problems, had some nice moments. What puts number five above the rest is the amount of detail within its packaging. Little things like when walking around the StarCon Academy on your way to class you spot Darth Vader and Obi-Wan Kenobi battling it out with light sabres in the distance. Or like the way Roger (our hero) sits in the command chair of his space vessel (i.e. the typical James T. Kirk pose – leaning forward slightly, one hand across the knee, the other on the armrest). I don't think it would be unfair to describe Space Quest V as the Police Squad of computer games. Despite the main plot going on in front, there always seems to be something bizarre and slightly surreal going on in the background.

But what of the plot. Well, if there's a reference to an old sci-fi film or TV show (mainly Star Trek) then it's probably found its way in here somewhere. One of the funniest images in the whole game actually comes with the packaging. Inside the 'free' copy of the Galactic

Inquirer (a send up of an American tabloid) is a feature about how SQV was made with one photo showing the designers huddled round a copy of the Star Trek Compendium ripping out ideas.

Essentially, Roger has given up the life of a janitor to join the StarCon Academy. Unfortunately he shows as much aptitude for this assignment as he did for his last one (none) so he spends most of his time bumming his way through exams and messing around in the StarCon simulator, pretending to be the captain of his own ship. After arriving late for his latest test, he is told to polish the StarCon crest in the arrival area. It's here that he first encounters the woman he was to marry in Space Quest IV (it gets a little confusing around here if you haven't played the previous time-travelling game), in the shape of one Ambassador, ahem, Wankmeister, which apparently is not quite as rude over there as it is over here.

After a couple of animated sequences showing the Ambassador's plans to remove the garbage from The Universe and how an errant rat accidentally chews a computer wire resulting in Roger getting command of his own ship, you are off to save The Universe, win the girl and destroy the bad guy etc. There are also sub-plots concerning a killer android out for Roger's blood, a rival for the ambassador's affections and various mutant undesirables to be dealt with.

Gut-busting

What prevents SQV from having superlatives heaped upon it from above is that it's let down by the same irritants that lets all the other Sierra adventures down. Shoddy animation coupled with an unfriendly interface system and a lack of overall polish. All the bits look as though they've been programmed by different people and just slotted together at the end without any thought of coherency. The quality of the plot is light years ahead of the quality of the control system. The sound is great, the graphics are just okay. It's the humour that really makes it stand out. Not that it had me busting as many guts as Monkey Island did, this is more of your "Ha ha, oh yes, very clever." sort of humour with a liberal amount of silliness thrown in for good measure.

SQV is good with a capital okay. There are worse ways of spending forty quid, Leisure Suit Larry V for instance, and it is showing that Sierra is finally heading back in the right direction. Give its interface and animation routines a bit of an overhaul, increase the amount of care spent on getting everything together and before long it'll be up there with LucasArts. I hope it does happen. Sierra used to be one of the best and it doesn't really deserve to be in the stagnant condition it finds itself in at the moment with only Dynamix titles providing the punters with any interest. ☒

"The quality of the plot is light years ahead of the quality of the control system. It's the humour that really makes it."

Roger Wilco The Next Mutation

Look at all those lovely windows just waiting to be cleaned. Those janitorial skills look like they're gonna come in handy.

Roger's beloved in full flow.

Foiled again.

Time to meet the crew and scare the hell out of them.

His own ship at last! Makes you feel all gooey inside, Makes you feel like you wanna get right out of the area.

Ringworld

Duncan MacDonald suffers from chronic ringworm... which made him the ideal person to review Ringworld (Revenge Of The Patriarch), the brand new point and click sci-fi extravaganza from Tsunami.

YOU GET A "FREE" book with this game, you know... Ringworld by Larry Niven. "So this game must be the computer version of this book in the way that Flight Of The Intruder was the computer version of that book," you may assume – but you'd be wrong. It had me confused for a while too... but then I noticed a small quote from Larry Niven on the back of the Ringworld packaging which said this: "I thought from the beginning that there should be a third Ringworld book, but it should be on computer. Revenge Of The Patriarch is the sequel to the first two books, and I'm glad it's as great as it is." The book you get "free" is in fact the first part of the trilogy – which, apart from just being a good read in itself, works as a sort of 'who's who and what's what in the Ringworld universe'. In other words, it has its uses. Being a painfully slow reader, however, I opted for the brief introductory blurb in the manual.

Ringworld is a pretty strange place – sort of like a huge centrifuge in which all the land gets thrown against the inside surface – a sort of inverse gravity if you like. The result is a variety of wierd and wonderful landscapes and bizarre ecosystems.

The plot...

Now this is where things get slightly foggy, because the manual doesn't help very much... but for those of you who really want to know what's been happening (and I know there will be several), I'll do a 'translation'.

"It has been an era of peaceful co-operation between Humans and Kzinti." Okay so far – there's a race called the Kzinti and we get on with them, living in harmony in a sort of Stevie Wonder/Paul McCartney type utopia. "Twenty years have elapsed since the Human, Louis Wu, and Kzin, Speaker To Animals, returned from the Ringworld." Eh? Speaker To Animals? Oh well, that was obviously dealt with in Ringworld book two... "Their journey is still a great secret to all but the most highly placed in the UN and Kzinti Patriarchy. The technology that the Puppeteers revealed to Wu and Speaker has resulted in a major collaboration between Earth and Kzin to produce the fastest ship known to either of their species, The Hyperdrive II." Fair enough, apart from the Puppeteer bit. "Technology, however, is not all that Speaker and Wu brought back from their trip to the Ringworld. They also discovered that the Puppeteers had involved both Humans and Kzinti in a breeding experiment of unheard of proportions." ... And on it goes for about five more paragraphs, telling you nothing other than you really ought to read the book(s) first. However... Thankfully on board your spaceship (in the game of course, I'm not suggesting for one minute that you actually own a spaceship yourself) there's a computer console. Log onto it and you can access countless pages of text and pictures on everything from Aardvarks to Zythium. Thank God for that, eh? But you're still none the wiser, are you? Oh well.

About the Ringworld...

Now this is an easy one. You know the rotating orbital platform in 2001: A Space Odyssey? Yes? Well, imagine the same sort of thing, but with a diameter of 200,000,000 miles (or thereabouts) and with a width so impressive that entire seas and continents could be squeezed in. And imagine that in the centre of this hypothetical rotating giant orbital platform is a star... radiating valuable light and heat to everything on the inner side of the ring. Well, you've just imagined Ringworld: a man made 'planet'. Its rotation gives it a pseudo gravity (on the inner side), allowing trillions of different people/aliens to live there, on landscapes even more diverse than you find on Earth. Perfect setting for a game, non? ☺

'Things are kind of "set up" for you fairly obviously.'

Story Board Type Bit

The character you control in Ringworld (Revenge Of The Patriarch) is Quinn – a human mercenary. Just to give you the general idea of how things work in this point and click affair, let's have a look at the main interactive bits from the first five or so minutes of the game.

1 This is the opening scene, showing Quinn at the gates of the castle owned by Chmme, the main Kzinti. In front of Quinn is a beam of light – obviously a futuristic doorbell. Quinn (aided by you) touches the beam, breaks the circuit, and is met by Lacch Captain, second son of Chmme. Quinn is led into the castle.

2 Now for a bit of dialogue in which you learn that Chmme has gone missing with Louis Wu, and they may be on Ringworld. You just sit back and read. Until, that is, the shooting starts. The Kzinti legs it to the next screen while Quinn has to point, click, and zap an assassin. A search of the stunned baddie reveals a floppy disk.

3 Beating a hasty retreat, Quinn finds the Kzinti already aboard a jet-cycle. Problem. As you are informed by the Kzinti, there are three cycles, and should one be left behind? Well, the Kzinti's thinking on this is that one of the assassins will use it to follow you. Over to Quinn to sort it out. And it couldn't be simpler.

4 Clicking on the rearmost jet-cycle makes Quinn clamber aboard... Brief trundle of hard disk... Now we see the dashboard, and Quinn can, using his Examine Icon, check out what all the buttons do. But why does he need to bother? After all, the Master/Slave buttons are already labelled (How thoughtful). You press Slave.

5 Having exited the Slave cycle, Quinn boards the lead cycle and inserts the disk he took from the stunned guard. He presses Master, then the start button, and off they go: Quinn in the first cycle, the Kzinti in the second and the third one following on auto. Now you just sit back and watch the scenery scroll for a while.

6 Having talked your way past a guard at the shipyard you now find yourself on board one of the two existing Hyperdrive ships. Here you meet Miranda Rees, the Hyperdrive Project chief engineer – and she's none too happy. She doesn't trust you one little bit... or the Kzinti geezer.

7 So you have to shoot her. Unfortunately you need her, so she ends up in the Autodoc. How to convince her that you're goodies? Well, as luck would have it, the Autodoc has a slot in its side... and you still have that disk. Insert disk in hole, mix well, leave to stand for a few seconds and voilà: a viewing monitor descends.

8 And as Miranda can plainly see, the message has the mark of the Patriarchal seal. She's mortified. Skulduggery is afoot at the highest levels. Now it's Quinn, the Kzinti and Miranda versus the world. In fact it's worse than that – it's Quinn, the Kzinti and Miranda versus The Universe. Off to bally old Ringworld then.

From the screenshots you'll probably have guessed roughly how the interface works... but if you haven't I'll just tell you that it's unpretentious, looks good, and allows you to do everything you need to do with the greatest of ease and speed... talk, walk, examine, touch, use, and select items from your inventory. So much for the interface then, but what about the actual game? Well, have you got a spare couple of years? Let's put it this way... Ringworld is very big, it's got a crackingly good storyline, there's plenty to do, plenty to sit back and simply watch, but at the end of the day it's fairly easy. Things are kind of 'set up' for you fairly obviously, and there's not a great deal in the way of lateral thinking needed. For me the 'easiness' is a bonus, because I'm a bit thick when it comes to this sort of game, but then, of course, there are those people who want to be stumped... the sort of people who played Monkey Island 2 on "Let Me Have The Whole Works, Both Barrels Between The Eyes" mode and still finished it in one picosecond. It's all so subjective you see. What can I say? Anyway, having just cunningly side-stepped the hardest part of the review, I'll briefly move onto the graphics, which are for the most part quite impressive. They're not as 'perfect' or 'polished' as something like Indiana Jones, but they're certainly more than adequate and evoke plenty of atmosphere – which is all important in this type of game. All in all, what with the enjoyably bookish storyline, the evocative backgrounds, the large game size and so on, Ringworld is very entertaining. Er... and that's about it. It's no ground breaker, sure, but it draws you in and makes you forget to go to bed. In fact the only thing that forces you go to bed is when you hit one of its many bugs and get hurled savagely back into dos. (Mind you, when that happens you're too annoyed to sleep anyway. Catch 22. Crikey.) Z

Zool

Laurence Scotford explains how to entice Ninjas from the Nth Dimension into your garden with a few bits of bread soaked in milk.

Slide, slide, sliding away to oblivion.

How the hell do I get down?

SONIC THE HEDGEHOG is a pussycat! Hang on, that doesn't quite fit in with the generally accepted biological way of things. Let's see... Sonic the Hedgehog reckons himself a bit of a smooth bastard. No, no, that still doesn't sound quite right. Erm... got it! What's the point of Sonic the Hedgehog? Folks in these parts aren't too fond of hedgehogs see. The only cool creatures in this neck of the woods are Ninjas of the nth Dimension<sup>1</sup>, as most people will tell you (you may find one or two rash individuals who are slightly less enthusiastic, but they usually find it necessary to take a very long holiday in a far distant part of the universe, or better still, in a far distant part of another universe).

The ninja who is currently winging his way home after a trying day at the local nunchuka throwing trials, goes by the name of Zool<sup>2</sup>. It's a well known fact that ninjas have a curiosity matched only by cats.<sup>3</sup> It is entirely due to this fact that when, as he speeds home, Zool spots a previously unobserved planet, he simply can't resist slipping down to take a quick look.

Like many curious ninjas before him, Zool finds himself in a bit of a pickle. (It would, perhaps, be more correct to say that he found himself in a bit of a jelly, since he has landed in a world made of sweets). You can't help but notice that this strange new planet has been sponsored by Chupa Chups (how nice of them to put up all that lolly).

Ninja Niceties

What we have here is the very best platform game yet to appear on the PC. That such an obviously console orientated game should convert so well to the PC is an indication that it has now become, without a shadow of a doubt, the most versatile games machine currently available.

Zool borrows heavily from other recent platform games, most notably S***c the Hedgehog, but then you already knew that. To be honest, Zool introduces enough new elements to justify its existence. Perhaps chief among these is that, unlike many games of this type, Zool has a low frustration factor. Not only are there restart points to be found on each level which, when activated, prevent you from having to replay the whole level after you have been killed, but there are three difficulty levels and you can have up to five continues, so you should get a fair way into the game even on your first play.

Of course, the real delight of Zool is not just in getting through each level, but in discovering all the hidden features. There are bonuses aplenty to be unearthed, hidden rooms and many inventive puzzles. In music world, for example, you come across a couple of giant keyboards. Hopping about from one key to another is all you need to do to play some simple tunes. It's fun, but it doesn't do much for you except waste your time and confirm that you have no musical ability whatsoever. What you need is some music of course, but where do you find it and what happens when you bash out the correct tune? You'll just have to play and find out.

That's Zool Folks

It's refreshing to see games of this type appear on the PC every now and again, especially when they are of this quality. There have been some pretty ropery platform games in the past<sup>4</sup>, but Zool is one of the new breed, and proves very successfully that you don't need a console to play them. ☒

FOOTNOTES

1] The dimension in question does actually have a number, but unfortunately it's got more than one digit, so is generally indicated by an embarrassed mumble. It can actually be uttered by residents of the planet Zogrott, but then they do have 36 fingers on each hand. Smug bastards.

2] His full name is actually Zoo'xrthqwxclsh@th'l, which is not very convenient when meeting new people at a party after downing six pints of Alterian ale.

3] It's a rather lesser known fact that, unlike cats, ninjas don't have nine lives, which makes a mockery of a certain popular saying, but then I suppose 'Curiosity killed the ninja' doesn't have quite the same ring to it.

4] So you have been reading the footnotes! Just checking...

THE WORLDS

MUSIC WORLD This is not the place to be if you think that Chopin is something you do with wood, or that Rave means getting very angry.

SWEET WORLD It's every anorexic's nightmare – being attacked on every front by jellies and spiky chocolate.

TOOL WORLD Make sure you nail those nasties down or you're sure to be hammered.

FUN FAIR WORLD There's nothing fair about this world, so don't get taken for a ride.

FRUIT WORLD Oh no! Phallic symbols everywhere, as you pick your way through giant carrots and bananas.

TOY WORLD or Attack of the Killer Teddy Bears. Don't be put off by cute, just shoot!

SHOOT 'EM-UP WORLD A bonus world hidden within one of the other worlds. Are we going to tell you where? No!

Ninjaerobics

What sets the modern breed of platform games apart from their predecessors (and Zool is certainly no exception) is the variety of actions the central character is expected to perform. Here is the range of things Zool gets up to.

SLIDING Take those nasty enemies down with a Vinny Jones sliding tackle.

CLIMBING Put the Chris Bonnington scramble into action to scale those walls.

MONKEY CLIMBING Try out the 'Nth Dimension assault' course in style.

SPINNING Zool's pirouettes are more legendary than Margot Fontayne's.

SHOOTING When all else fails – pepper 'em.

JUMPING Attain un-thought of heights with a well-timed leap into the unknown.

RUNNING Put the miles between yourself and those regenerating jellies.

Shareware Concept

QUICK TEMPLATE

Order Code: 11640

Total Disks: 1

Quick Template is basically a pop up help file that is loaded when you switch on and stays in memory and is called up by pressing the hot keys. If you press the hot keys at the DOS prompt you get a full list of DOS commands and by choosing one it will type it in for you. If you then go into your Word Processor and press the hot keys it gives the command and key list for your Word Processor. You will sometimes wonder how it knows which program you are using and at the extent of the help screens at your command. You can create your own templates for any of your existing programs but QT comes with files for DOS, Word, Word Perfect, Word Star, Lotus 123, DBase III and many more. New and experienced users alike will find this program invaluable and easy to use with mouse or keyboard.

KIDS TRIVIA

Order Code: 11570

Total Disks: 1

This is the best Trivia game I have seen, including the ones in the local pubs. It operates in a Windows style with push buttons and top line menu so a mouse is definitely recommended. It is very easy to use and has so many options, that may be changed, they are impossible to list. Get a copy now and I guarantee you will not be disappointed. It is probably best for children of ten years old and over. Requires EGA.

PC TUTOR

Total Disks: 1

The PC TUTOR is an essential program for all readers who wish to explore the potential of their computers further. It runs well on all graphics adapter types and has no special hardware requirements. PC TUTOR takes you step by step through the intricacies of the IBM PC and MS-DOS. By completing each section you will learn about the keyboard and all the special keys such as INS and DEL. You may then proceed through exercises in computer terminology which explain jargon words. The final exercises introduce you to MS-DOS, its basic commands and what it is supposed to do for you on a day to day basis. After the basic level you will cover more advanced commands which enable you to manipulate information and make good use of storage such as floppy disks. Finally, batch files are covered in detail explaining why we use these compact command files and what each batch sub-command does. All in all a very well composed program which is simple to use and educational.

DANCAD 3D

Total Disks: 6

A very comprehensive computer aided design program which encompasses aspects of 3D drawing. Dancad has recently been upgraded to this massive version making it the most comprehensive CAD package available through shareware. The program provides facilities such as automatic dimensioning, detailed zoom and the ability to independently rotate elements of the drawing. The program can be used for 2D drafting but really comes into its own in 3 dimensions. Support is provided for all popular IBM and Epson printers but more impressive is the post script support. Dancad really is proof, if it were needed, of the professional quality of shareware marketed products. Requires Hard Disc.

Code 1830, Excellent CAD Program

ENVISION PUBLISHER

Order Code: 10470

Total Disks: 2

Envision Publisher is a full-featured desktop publishing program with advanced WYSIWYG (What You See Is What You Get) page layout and composition features that let you design documents in an interactive visual environment. Text can be scaled from 4 points to 108 points without loss of quality and can be rotated, bolded, kerned or filled with any pattern. It includes a powerful set of object drawing tools including PCX import and scaling. It also has full clip board capability. This program is the best of its kind on the market for page making facilities, it is far better than a number of 'Commercial' pagemaking programs that are popular with users who only have a dot-matrix printer. It will print to laser or dot matrix and with a better quality than our 350.00 pound package does. If you order this program along with NEOPAINT, our professional paint package (Code: 10460) you would have all your DTP problems solved for less than 100.00 for the registered versions. Requires Hard Disc.

Code 10470, Brilliant DTP Package

NEOPAINT

Order Code: 10460

Total Disks: 2

At Last! A shareware paint package that will take care of all your professional needs. It is so good that we now use it for all our drawing and image manipulation for the artwork you see in this section of the magazine. It has a colour stamp facility that allows you to create your own images to be copied onto an existing screen without wiping out the background. It has more facilities than the package we used to use and costs a fraction of the price. It includes all the standard tools, of which most of them work in Zoom mode. It can invert, flip, rotate, scale, stretch, smudge and anything else you might want it to do. It includes PCX and GIF in its file formats, works with Hercules and above in 2, 16 or 256 colours and can print to laser or dot matrix. You can convert colour images to 256 grey scales and work with multiple images but best of all, it doesn't need Windows to run which means it is easy to install and use. This is the best package to become available on Shareware in a long time. There are already loads more Fonts available with more becoming available every week. Uses every mode EXCEPT CGA. Requires Hard Disc.

Code 10460, The Best Paint Package

QUIK MENU III

Total Disks: 1

Here is An alternative to Windows that lets you run DOS based programs quickly and with an excellent graphical interface that will make you wish you could run your Windows Application through it. . . . Well you will be pleased to know that you can do just that! At the touch of a button (or click of a mouse) you can launch into windows and run all your favourite applications. The facilities of this program are endless, you can set up your computer exactly as you want it and it will work on the network. You can customise Icons and 3D buttons, Copy, Rename, Delete and Move files or file groups. You can have multiple menu levels with hyper text style links, password protection, timer and activity log, telephone dialer, pop up calculator, text editor, wallpaper, screen saver, macros, etc, etc. The best thing about this program though is that, unlike other Dos Shell programs, Quik Menu III is NOT memory resident so all your programs will run through it. It has had rave reviews all over America and is definitely not to be missed. It is written by the same authors as the new leading DTP program 'NEOPAINT'. Requires Hard Disc.

ALIENS ATE MY BABYSITTER

Total Disks: 1

This is a special edition of the Commander Keen series from Apogee and the best one yet. As 'Billy Blaze', the adventure begins when your babysitter is kidnapped by Aliens from Fribbulus Xax, she is on the main menu for dinner! With your parents due home soon, how will you be able to tell them that the "Aliens Ate My Babysitter!?" This smooth scrolling, flicker free graphical adventure game is a must for your collection and as with all later Apogee games this comes with soundblaster support. Requires EGA.

AVARICIUS

Total Disks: 1

As Avaricius you tour the locations of ancient Rome trying to evade the Taxman, unfriendly lions and your nagging wife. This graphical adventure written in the style of Sierra's Leisure Suit Larry series is one of the most humorous games I have played in a long time. You control the red headed Hero, known as Avvy for short, by the use of the cursor keys or mouse, and move around the rooms to examine or use objects within the game. You can tell Avvy what to do by typing in at the keyboard or using the menu choices at the top of the screen. The corny but amusing humour throughout the game, and in the document file, are definitely British and will keep you playing for weeks. Requires EGA

BRIX

Total Disks: 1

Any game that tests my logical mind is always a winner with me, and this excellent game of Brix is top of my list. It is an arcade puzzler game that tests your ability to think fast and move quickly. The idea is to pick up individual blocks, move them around and drop them next to matching blocks to make them disappear. When all the blocks have gone you move on to the next level, sound easy? Well the first few levels are just to get you used to the game, but, the other 100 levels will test you to your limit with the addition of elevators, boiling acid, lasers, lava acid and anti-grav. This game has excellent graphics and sound blaster support but does need a 286 or better to run. Requires Hard Disc & VGA.

CADDIEHACK GOLF

Total Disks: 1

There are few games of 18 hole golf available on shareware so it is a relief that the few that are available are good. This playable demonstration of Caddiehack golf has good 3d style graphics of the golf course with sky, trees and of course a fairway all in plain view. Up to 10 people may play together so this can be a fun game for all the family. Requires EGA.

COMMANDER KEEN

Total Disks: 1

Commander Keen is published by the leading shareware arcade games company Apogee. The quality of the range, which is growing constantly, is breath taking. Apogee games test your PC hardware to its limit making best use of graphics sound and processor speed. The scrolling graphics on all titles are un-rivalled, flicker free and very detailed. Commander Keen (Vol. 1) sees our hero crash land and the Vorticons, the enemy in game players par lance, pinch key components from the space ship. Commander Keen must risk life and limb negotiating scene after scene of challenges to regain possession of the parts and re-build the ship. You will not believe the quality when you see this game! Requires Hard Disc & EGA.

COMMANDER KEEN IN KEEN DREAMS

Total Disks: 1

Commander Keen has the largest fan club of any other shareware game available. Transend has scoured the world from Norway to the U.S.A. in the search for more Keen Games. We found this latest version from Gamers Edge in America, along with many other titles from ID Software, now known as the lost collection of ID Software. Your Hero is Back and needs help to rescue the captured children being held by the Vicious Vegetables. We fell about laughing at the jogging carrots, head butting parsnips and other whacky characters as we jumped, climbed and ran about the many levels. A well aimed flower bomb soon put paid to the battling vegies, but only for a few seconds to give you time to pass, save the children and leave quickly. Shin up the firemans poles to heights never reached before but before careful the potatoe doesn't bash your head in at the top. Game players every where are now queuing up for a copy of this excellent graphical game with breathtaking colours. Requires EGA.

Code 10000, Excellent Multi-Level Game

CORNCOB 3D

Total Disks: 1

Good Shareware flight simulators are a little thin on the ground (or in the air) so, we were delighted to find this one. A hard disk is preferable although you can run Corncob from a high density floppy. It is 1949 and you are in control of a standard front-line ground attack plane, you have a choice of missions on which to embark. Your objective is to complete your mission and return to base in one piece. The Author has paid a lot of attention to detail in the use of controls and instruments. It has excellent graphics and flight simulation, you can even leave the plane and walk around it if you wish. Corncob is one of the best Shareware flight simulators I used and will provide hours of entertainment for any would be Hero. Requires VGA.

TRANSEND SHAREWARE MAY - TRANSEN

DARE TO DREAM*Order Code: 11670*Total Disks: 1

You are Tyler Norris in this great game for Windows from the Epic Mega Games team. You are trapped in your dream and to escape you must solve bizarre puzzles, travel to strange lands and meet even stranger creatures. With brilliant graphics and total mouse control you will find this one of the best Windows games you have played. You can collect and use objects and talk to the other characters in the game, even the alligator in the sewer. If you have a soundblaster card the gameplay is enhanced by the games music. If you have Windows, 2 Meg hard disk space free then you should get this game. Because of the size of the program (1.2 meg) we can only supply this game on 3.5" disks. Requires Hard Disc.

DUKE NUKEM*Order Code: 1700*Total Disks: 1

This amazing arcade action game is one of many from Apogee Software and is as good as, and better, than most commercial games of this type. The graphics are very well animated as you guide the Duke, a computerised Rambo type character, around the various games blasting everything that moves. Beware of the energy sapping spikes and various alien types as you run around collecting hidden rewards and points. You are given various hints, as you discover treasures, to help you along the way. The game is very well documented and has a good quality menu system in all sections. This is a very addictive game well worth registering for the extra two chapters that are supplied. Requires Hard Disc & EGA.

COSMO'S COSMIC ADVENTURE*Order Code: 3070*Total Disks: 2

What is green with red spots, has suction hands and an overbite like Bart Simpson. Why Cosmo! of course, the young alien on his way to visit Disney World with his parents until their ship is struck by a blazing comet forcing them to land on an uncharted planet. Cosmo runs off to explore the area while Dad repairs the ship, but, on his return he finds them missing and strange Alien (alien to Cosmo that is) footprints are all around the ship. Your task is to guide Cosmo around the dual scrolling screens collecting points, health and hints while searching for his parents. You achieve this by looking, leaping on the aliens and scaling walls with your suction hands. Due to the great graphics of this game it does need a minimum of a 286 processor, EGA monitor and a Hard Disc. Requires Hard Disc & EGA.

Code 3070, Help Cosmo Find His Parents

ELF LAND*Order Code: 11190*Total Disks:

Elf Land is an excellent little adventure with very good graphics. You travel the land avoiding the nasty characters and bumping into lots of friends. As you bump into other characters they will give you a tip on what to avoid, how to defeat the nasties and where to go. It is a platform type game similar to the Commander Keen series with scrolling screens and your character having the ability to walk, jump and fire berries at the nasties. A very enjoyable game. Requires EGA.

LIFELESS PLANET... NO BEER*Order Code: 11520*Total Disks: 1

This text adventure is one of the better ones available on shareware. It is always important, because of the lack of graphics, that the user is given enough detail to help him imagine the layout of the game he is playing. This is easily achieved in this game which also has a few ASCII based graphics to help you. It has all the standard commands such as N,S,E,W,Take,Drop etc with enough locations to keep you playing for months.

JILL OF THE JUNGLE*Order Code: 8250*Total Disks: 1

This excellent game from Epic MegaGames puts them hot on the heels of Apogee for the number one spot in games programming. Its many levels of scrolling screens and action packed adventure will happily measure up to any of the Commander Keen games. CGA, EGA or VGA modes are utilised depending on your hardware, it also has very good soundblaster support. You control our heroine Jill as she battles with different creatures in her search for weapons, gems and health giving food. A nice touch to this game is the ability to sample all the sounds heard in the game at the touch of the keys. You will not be disappointed with this disc and on registration will receive two extra volumes. Requires CGA.

JOUST VGA*Order Code: 1420*Total Disks: 1

See those gladiators fly. Fly? Yes, they roam the skies on their trusty steeds, well Ostrich's actually. Joust against your opponent with this hilarious VGA arcade action game. The knights of the sky zoom around on the back of the ostrich which flaps its wings whenever you tap your 'flap' key the more you tap the higher he goes. Prang your opponent with your lance to turn him into an egg. You must smash the egg quickly or else it will hatch out again and hound you until you get the knight again, or he gets you. A very fresh addition to the arcade section, great fun and one that can be played over and over again. Requires VGA.

MAJOR STRYKER*Order Code: 11390*Total Disks: 2

The game we have all been waiting for, the new release from Apogee the leading shareware games author. As Major Stryker you fly your craft using the cursor keys for direction control while blasting enemy gun ports and spaceships with the ALT key. As the game progresses you can obtain power-ups to give you more and more fire power, and you will need it if you are to survive. Again Apogee make a major breakthrough in their 3D effect scrolling screens that leave the competition standing. One of the best shoot-em-up games currently available, you won't be disappointed. Requires EGA

NEW WOLF-3D MAPS*Order Code: 9080*Total Disks: 1

A most unusual set of maps of Wolfenstein 3D. The challenge is to expect the unexpected, the author says. Guards walk out of the walls from seemingly empty rooms. There are many hidden areas to seek out and these may only be found by looking at the maps with the map editor, do this only when you get desperate. If you have Wolf-3d and have completed the existing levels then get this disk and start all over again. Requires Hard Disc & VGA.

ROBO MAZE III*Order Code: 9320*Total Disks: 1

A sequel to the best selling Robo Maze II, in this game you have even more places to explore by guiding your character through various strange lands. Visit the wise men in the caves marked with arrows to receive weapons and advice, without which you will not get very far. If you enjoyed Robo Maze II then you will love this one. Requires VGA.

SOLAR WINDS*Order Code: 11660*Total Disks: 2

Solar winds is the latest game from Epic Mega Games, and by far the best yet. As Jake Stone you are sent to discover the secret of an alien race which leads you to discover a mysterious plot. You are given a number of missions to complete to get through each stage of the game, these include coordinates in space you must travel to and various people you need to meet and speak with. Because you have a purpose within the game it makes it 100 times better than a shoot-em-up type of program. You are in control of all your weapons, power, hyperdrive etc which all help to make Solar Winds a space adventure rather than just a game. The graphics are excellent and you will find this a hard game to stop playing but, with light years to travel, aliens to defeat and scientists to save... Who cares. Requires Hard Disc & VGA.

Code 11660, Latest MegaGames Blockbuster

THE CATACOMB ABYSS*Order Code: 20000*Total Disks: 2

EGA Graphics owners cursed when they saw that Wolfenstein 3D required a minimum of VGA to display its 256 colours. Wolfenstein was nearly Transend's best selling game of '92... Nearly! All must now step aside and make way for The Catacomb Abyss from U.S.A's Gamers Edge team. Our librarian passed me the disk

Archer McLean's

He's hopeless at snooker and tragic at bar billiards. Can Paul Lakin get anywhere with pool? Don't hold your breath.

R

EMEMBER Jimmy White's Whirlwind Snooker? If you do then you could really skip the next 100 words and, pausing only to glance at a few screen shots, move straight onto the third paragraph. The rest of you get yourselves comfortable and listen carefully. I'm only going to say this once.

Snooker Cues

Jimmy White's Whirlwind Snooker changed computerised snooker by introducing a genuinely effective 3D appearance, good sound effects and most importantly of all a genuine feel for the game. Unless (like me) you were seriously challenged in the co-ordination department, you were soon blending back spin, double deflections and huge slices of luck to produce thrilling matches and maximum breaks (I wish). The game looked good, sounded good, played like a dream and sold by the lorry load. A follow up was inevitable.

Pool Rules

Some people are never satisfied. They wanted to play pool not snooker. And not for them a trip down the Starving Peasant with a pocket full of 10p pieces. They wanted to play pool locked away in the solitude of their own room. (They will, of course, go on to become sad twisted individuals heavily into murder or stamp collecting.) Still the demand for a pool version was there so a pool version is here. That's the free market for you.

At first glance there's little difference between Snooker and Pool. If it's not broken why mend it? The icon driven control system is pretty much the same as before (which is a good thing) and the nation

Cue the Action

- 1 VIEW CUE BALL: focus in on cue ball, which is probably nowhere near where you intended it to be.
- 2 VIEW LINE: line of travel (and rebound off cushion) of an uninterrupted shot. A sort of "I wish" scenario really.
- 3 GAME CONTROL: a quick summary of what all the icons do.
- 4 CHALK CUE: essential for spin shots and time-wasting to irritate opponents.
- 5 7 9 11 SPIN: top, bottom and/or side spin. Mastering this is crucial to really effective play. England test cricketers should avoid this option.
- 6 INFORMATION: check up on your current performance, provided you're thick skinned.
- 8 TAKE SHOT: speaks for itself. The cross marks where you'll hit cue ball. If the ball's marked 'No' it means you can't hit it (probably because there's another ball in the way of the cue)
- 10 SCREEN TYPE: move control panel from top to side or vice versa.
- 12 PLAN VIEW: select between 8 views of table, 4 lengthways, 4 widthways.
- 13 16 ZOOM: ...er zoom in or out from table.
- 14 15 VIEW ANGLE: increase or decrease angle from which the table is viewed. Essential for lining up a shot properly.
- 17 18 MOVE CUE: move the cue clockwise or anti-clockwise round cue ball.
- 19 SET POWER: The further you drawback the cue the more powerful the shot. Okay so you always blast it but sometimes a delicate tap will do. Try it sometime.
- 20 21 PLAYER STATUS: important information like which colour ball you're after.

will rejoice to hear that if you take too long over a shot the funny faces start appearing on the balls, flies buzz over the baize and now eyes start appearing round the table. Let's face it who cares about the gameplay as long as the ball sticks it's tongue out at you (as the actress... oh never mind). The most obvious difference (apart from the colour of the balls) is the rules. Obvious really. There are 3 versions of pool playable here. 8 Ball UK Coin Op

Pool

Table Rules, 8 Ball USA Bar Table Rules (which are pretty much the same) and 9 Ball USA Tournament Rules which is somewhat different. All the balls are numbered and each shot must hit the lowest numbered ball on the table first, though you can pot any ball you like. Once again it ends when the black ball is potted. Although this is the my personal favourite in terms of rules it suffers visually since the numbers are always facing you. This means you always know what number the balls are but at the expense of giving the impression that they are sliding rather than rolling.

Competitive Society

Probably the most significant difference/improvement to Pool is its competitive range. As well as Trickshot, Practice and Game modes (all of which were in Snooker) there's a Match mode allowing you to play the best of 3, 5, 7 or 9 games plus a Tournament mode for up to eight players so you can seven-ball all your mates.

Better still there's now a choice of 20 computer opponents. The worst of these couldn't pot a marble in a shell hole, the best are capable of winning the game in two shots. You can only find out the relative skills of each by playing against them, although names like Disaster Dave are a bit of a give-away.

In real pool of course you either win or lose. Archer Maclean, knowing us as a feverishly competitive, high-score-table obsessed bunch has invented a 'Rankometer' giving you a percentage score (and pointed comment) based on your ratio of shots, fouls and pots and the time it all took.

"One day there will be a virtual reality pool game where you are distracted by fag ash and pools of lager on the table"

Pooling Resources

Archer Maclean's Pool is easily as good as Jimmy White's Whirlwind Snooker, given the variety it's probably better. It's not a perfect sim. One day there'll be a virtual reality pool game where you are distracted by fag ash and pools of lager on the table and some six foot five skinhead threatening to beat you up if you're not off in 30 seconds. However for now Pool is immensely playable, challenging and gets better as you get better. So should you buy it? If you haven't got Jimmy White's Whirlwind Snooker then yes, definitely. However if you have got Snooker then think carefully. If you liked Rugby would you buy the Rugby League and Rugby Union versions of the same game? Well yes you probably would wouldn't you. ☒

PC ZONE score

Excellent Pool game. An impressive, if not wildly different, sequel to Whirlwind Snooker.

Sharkey's 3D Pool

Tasteless Clockwork Orange reference? – Sex, ultraviolence and Capablanca? “Yes please,” said Mark Burgess.

CHESS HAS BEEN around for two thousand years. What will it look like two millennia hence? Electronic Arts is making a fanciful guess with Battlechess 4000.

Fans of the earlier Battlechess programs will guess that this is no ordinary implementation. Purists who shudder at Napoleonic War chess sets and who think chess should be cerebral, with all violence sublimated, will not have a good time with this.

If you want a brute power chess game with nice, uncomplicated, Staunton pieces, look elsewhere. This is a chess program that will actually make you laugh out loud.

The pieces are unlike anything you've seen before: robot rooks, maggot-like pawns, a dodder King and a tarty – in a nice way – Queen. The knights look like bouncers and the bishops are sinister gigglers. All move in the conventional way but when they take a piece you are in for a short film of comic violence.

You know it is no ordinary chess program as soon as you open the box. Eight HD disks – there are smaller flight sims. The program will take up over 14Mb on your hard drive. Installation is painless. It comes in two versions, VGA and SVGA. For the latter you will have to know the type of your SVGA card (the name will appear, briefly, when you switch on your computer). Battlechess 4000 works with the VESA protocol – which is emerging as the SVGA standard (sorry, wrong column).

The program opens with an isometric display of the board and pieces. Red and blue have been chosen instead of white and black. The menu is, as usual, hidden but re-appears when the mouse pointer is moved to the top of the screen. The file option has save/load/new/quit, preferences (set default values) and print (parallel port only).

The View menu lets you toggle between two and three dimensional views. The 2D display is exceptional. 'Sound' is another toggle switch. 'Fast moves' simplifies things to a single mouse click if your piece can only make one legal move, or if only one of your pieces can move to an empty square, or take an enemy. Intuitive means that if you click on a square and more than one of your pieces can move to it, Battlechess will pick the likeliest and ask for confirmation.

Control menu lets you swap sides, use the computer as a referee in a human vs human game and play chess via a modem. You can force the computer to move, replay, rewind and fast forward. With 'Take Back' you can – er – take back not only your own moves but also your opponents.

This is great when the computer thinks of something that you haven't. (Every third move in my case.) If you choose 'Thinking', the computer will try to anticipate your next move.

'Learning' allows the computer to record any fine openings you make in its own library.

Book Control is selected from the Control Menu and gives control over the library of opening moves. There are 300,000 (it says here). A number of the more common ones are named – Reti opening, King's Indian Defence and so forth.

The Special menu gives you a 'Hint' option, 'Show-Info', 'Your Grade' and 'My Grade'. The last reckons the program's ELO to be over 2,000. 'Alter' will let you set up the board anyway you like so long as there are two kings and neither are in check. 'Set Clocks' does what you'd think, 'Set Draw' makes the program play for a stalemate. 'Set Time' is the option that determines the levels of difficulty – ten beginner's levels, Average, Tournament and Matching. The last doesn't match your ability; it means that the computer spends as much time thinking about its moves as you do. Emphatically not the same thing. The other two expert levels are Infinite and Blitz.

But you can get this on any chess program. What about the violence?

When one piece takes another, the loser is not just removed from the board. It is shot, strangled, crushed, swatted, blown to pieces or dismembered. And that's just half of it. Knight takes Queen by breathing garlic into her face, a pawn kisses her and she dies from mortification, a bishop turns her into a fly and swats her, a rook turns into a tin can and crushes her and the King hypnotises her and makes her screw herself into the ground. And you thought our royals had problems.

"The ideal program to wear arcade players from mindless violence to pure, cerebral aggression."

THE QUEEN IS DEAD!

- ① The Queen sniggers as she beats the rook into a tin can.
- ② The tin can that was once a rook raises itself up on some wheels...
- ③ And rapidly descends, leaving one ever-so-slightly flat monarch.

Battlechess 4000

REVIEW

The Queen gets her own back. She tears the arms of rooks, rolls pawns into balls, throws bishops about and the catfight between two Queens has to be seen to be believed. All of this mayhem is accompanied by skilful use of sound, from shrieks, gunshots and the clump of the rooks to the stately pace of the bishops and the squelch of the pawns.

Although there are a few eyeballs rolling around the place, the violence is essentially comic. There are many in-jokes about films. When rook takes pawn, the rook shows a film called Rambot xxvii. As the pawn cheers the bazooka wielding hero, the weapon comes through the screen and blows it to atoms. What could be funnier than that? Knights fight each other with light swords from Star Wars. When Queen takes knight, she throws a bone into the air, which lands as the monolith from 2001 and crushes him. I tell you this office hasn't laughed so much since we blew away Bambi in Wacky Funsters.

Electronic Arts have put in many more 'serious' chess features than were in the earlier Battlechess programs. This makes Battlechess 4000 the ideal program to wean arcade players from mindless violence to pure, cerebral aggression. I imagine that people simply wanting to learn the game would go for something like Chessmaster. They'd be missing a lot of fun, though. Z

(Previous page) Here it is in all its glory. You might not recognise it - it's the ninth game in the Short/Timman contest this year. (Above) Blessed relief. Or sop to traditionalists? Note that the 'name' feature can't cope with Nigel Short. Tough luck on Capablanca.

IN PERSPECTIVE

Unfair to compare this with a normal chess game, but it beats the 'novelty' ones hands down.

XENOBOTS

Can a bunch of tin cans really take over Earth? More to the point, can another bunch of tin cans save it? "Vorsprung durch technik" as Laurence Scotford says in the near future.

Dear Mom,
I've been having a great time at the front. You can tell pop I'll be home soon and I've still got a leg left and one fully functioning eye. Aren't I the lucky one? The picture on the front of this card shows the enemy base exploding. I fired the last shot mom! They say the radiation sickness will kill me soon, but what do I care? I'm a hero...

WHAT IS IT with these alien races? Just as you're settling down for a quiet weekend in the country, they have to come along and invade your home planet. One wouldn't mind if they played fair, but massive, heavily armed and armoured robots, fighting against flesh and blood with only bows and arrows is hardly cricket is it? When these alien elements come along and ruin the neighbourhood, quite frankly the only thing to do is dust off your old nuclear warheads and give the hulking brutes a jolly good hiding. Of course it makes a bit of a mess of the surrounding countryside, but what are a few hedgerows between friends? Or a few towns and villages for that matter.

Trouble is, these foreign types don't give up easily, and we don't want to keep messing up our own back yard just to keep the blighters away do we? Oh dearie me no. But just suppose we managed to get hold of some of these new-fangled robo-thingsies and take them down to Dave's Used Autos and Repair Shop (nice chap, fixed me up with a couple of cut-price rollers), and get his lovely lads to tinker about a bit so that we can get some of our chaps inside 'em. Then we'd be able to give those filthy spaceites a thrashing eh?

The briefing

Okay chaps, listen up. We've got ourselves a bit of a live situation here. Spacey's come back and he's jolly well asking for it. We've got these retro-fitted robo-thingsies, which are an equal match for the alien equipment, so I expect to see them all out before tea. We've a number of missions all over the world, and our objective is to take the alien scum and show him the back door. This is done by seeing off all the blighters in the vicinity and then giving their base a jolly good going over.

You've got three types of robot to work with. Figure one in your briefing manual shows the Scout. He's a fast little nipper, but not very well defended or armed, so look after him. He should be used for advance missions beyond enemy lines to lay alarm buoys and mines and gen up on the enemy's position and situation. Figure two in your briefing manual shows where you'll find the controls in this damnable foreign junk.

Your main fighting machine is the Humanoid. He's shown in figure three. He's slower, but damn tough and he packs some punch. You'll use him to do most of the fighting at close quarters and to make heavy assaults on the enemy base. Figure four shows the control panel in your retro-fitted models, so make sure you understand every element of it.

Finally we come to the Scorpion (Figure five). Let me assure you that this creature really does have a sting in its tail: a homing missile that will destroy every spaceite within a halfkilometre radius of the impact point. Naturally this may result in some friendly losses during the heat of the battle, but remember it's your duty and privilege to die for your planet. The scorpion's control panel, shown in figure six, includes specialised cargo handling equipment. These units are vital for the maintenance and construction of our power and communications net, so I expect them to be fully defended. I don't want to see these units being lost because of foolhardy heroics.

I want everyone here to become fully conversant with the use and capabilities of the net. It consists of a series of relays which are placed in patterns radiating outwards from the base. These relays are used for beaming power to the 'bots and carrying messages back and forth between them and the base. Figure seven shows a 'bot approaching a relay. It's vital that we maintain the net and extend it toward the alien base as far as we can. Once you get beyond the net, you're on your own. That far out you'll be operating off battery power, so it's imperative that you get in, do the business and get back out as quickly as you can. I warn you now that I won't risk men and machinery to rescue any silly bugger that gets caught with his pants down.

I want you all to remember that I'll be behind you every step of the way. I'll be able to get in touch with you all from my command post in the situation room. Turn to figure eight in your manual and you'll see the situation room laid out, with all the vital equipment labelled for easy identification. From here I can monitor the status of each 'bot and manage the battle using the tactical map. I'll also be handling your repairs and refits and our power resources. Believe me, I'd really like to be out there in the field with you chaps, but I'm far too valuable to this mission, so I can't be allowed into the combat zone. It really breaks my heart, but life's tough like that.

It only remains for me to say "Tally ho" and "Good Luck". Now go out there and do it to them before they do it to you... I mean us!

A brigadier reminisces

Well, we really gave 'em what for. These nasty foreign types with their strange ways and customs come over here and expect us to play the game by their rules, but we always teach 'em a thing or two. Mind you, I lost some good lads in that conflict. Of course I was right out there in the thick of the battle, taking the heat with the rest of them. This award here you see, is for courage in the face of adversity. Well, yes, now that you mention it, I did spend most of the war inside a reinforced geodesic dome, but that base had some close calls – it even got hit by a stray shell at one stage, and I completely ruined a perfectly good pair of khaki trousers. Now then, I suppose you'll be wanting to know what it was really like out there. Very well, mine will be a large scotch, hold the water.

It has to be said that this war was, visually speaking, quite splendid. The landscape was a bit bleak and looked the same everywhere. That's down to our earlier nuclear strikes of course, but I did end up wishing that, at the very least, the colour would change a bit. Having said that our shiny new 'bots looked tremendous. I'm told by our technical chappies that the images of them we saw on our monitors were derived from ray-traced images, and very nice they look too.

If I felt so inclined, I could actually operate any of the machines in the field directly and control them manually, but my best bet was always to take an overall strategic view and do my thinking from the operations room where I could keep an eye on everything – unless my direct control was vital. Early on in the war, this was quite challenging as I learned to use the auto programs that drive each 'bot, but even though I was assigned to more difficult battles as I gained experience, I found that I quickly tired of the whole campaign.

I know all you young hopefuls are champing at the bit to get out there, and I can recommend the experience, but to be honest you may find yourself opting for early retirement. All the best to you anyway. Tally Ho! ☐

"...this war was, visually speaking, quite splendid."

IN PERSPECTIVE

Mechwarrior is a more detailed game along the same lines, while the ageing Stellar 7 will appeal more to fans of fast action.

Mechwarrior

Stellar 7

Xenobots

Granta can devote an entire issue to hammering the Germans, why not us? Mark Burgess makes a bid for a job on The Sun.

CRAZED VEGETARIAN Adolf Hitler has stolen a sacred relic: the spear used by Longinus to pierce the side of Christ. Why? A student of the occult, Hitler believes the spear has magic powers. No weirder than the other stuff he believes in, I guess.

Your mission is to retrieve the spear and give it back to the Vatican or whatever. To do this you must blunder around maze-like corridors killing every sentient being you find. Sounds like Wolfenstein? You bet.

You are William 'BJ' Blazkowicz, maverick adrenaline addict. Honest bullets, not holy spears are your thing. The game starts in the sewer tunnels of the castle (what is it with adventure games and sewers?).

If you've played Wolfenstein you'll know what to do. If you haven't, don't worry. It's not complicated. All you have to do is stay alive and kill everything that moves. The programmers, iD, are the same and so are the tactics. Remember there are three sorts of guard: deaf, smart and moving. The deaf guards are the ones you rush up to and stab in the back (gunshots alert the smart guards). Smart guards track the noise of gunfire and of you and moving guards you just blunder into.

The brown guards – the stormtroopers – are more numerous and the easiest to kill, apart from the dogs. The blue SS men and the white-clad officers are harder. Worse are the mutants, which are like goose-stepping Boris Karloffs and – worst of all – strange nasties who will be armed like a small nation state are as easy to kill as the Graf Spee.

Your own armament is a knife and a luger with eight bullets. You will find weapons in secret rooms but you will probably get your first machine gun by killing its SS owner. For those difficult encounters with mutants you need a chaingun, a kind of hand held Gatling gun that eats ammunition and clears whole rooms of life.

Food, treasure, keys, ammunition and one-ups (balloons that give you an extra life) will be scattered about the place – often in secret passages or rooms. You can only find these by pushing against the wall and seeing if it gives way. Which, of course, makes you feel a right prat – especially if someone backshoots you while you're doing it.

There are few hints to these secret places; generally try everywhere. Pay close attention to walls with signs (like 'Verbotten' on level four or 'Achtung' on level six). Rooms that are empty and corridors that ominously end in a blank wall should arouse suspicion.

When you blunder into a secret room full of first-aid kits or guns, get worried. It means you are about to meet a heavily armed psychopath with a tenacious grip on life.

Trans Grösse is a chaingun toting maniac who makes his appearance on level four. Barnacle Wilhelm has a chaingun and a missile launcher and tries to splat you on level ten. The ÜberMutant is the creation of Dr. Schnabbs, the syringe chucking maniac from Wolfenstein. He has a chaingun built into his chest and cleavers at the end of his arms – like Edward Scissorhands with an attitude. He ambushes you outside the locked doors on level 16. Guardian of the Spear is the Death Knight. Two chainguns and two missile launchers... we are talking hardware here.

The tactics for dealing with these madmen can be summed up in two words – run away. Empty all the ammo you can into them and run away to reload and heal yourself. You can survive a chaingun for only a couple of seconds and you won't survive a missile attack at all. Dodge. Think of the bonus you'll get when he expires in a fountain of gore.

(Top) The spear! Goal of your endeavours. When you touch it, the whole level changes. Ghosts attack you and the Angel of Death appears. (Middle) Hidden passage to a purple maze. Not only are they psychopaths they're tasteless. (Above) The Death Knight, guardian of level 18. (Below) Über Mutant

Eye Of The Beholder

Legends Of Valour

Spear Of Destiny

The Stygian Abyss

Ultima Underworld II

Spear of Destiny is Son of Wolfenstein. The differences are mainly to do with the way it's being sold. Spear isn't shareware like Wolfenstein but a commercial program. The two level sample you may have seen is a demo, not the unregistered version. And don't mention it to Apogee; this has nothing to do with them. There are eighteen official floors to Spear and some secret levels.

I loved Wolfenstein and I like this. But I have a higher duty to the reader, to the truth and to my haggard white-haired confessor. iD programmers have moved from the world of shareware. They are in the long grass where the big dogs go and I think they're lost. One or two years ago this game would have an impact like... like... well, like Wolfenstein. But now we have games like Ultima Underworld II which makes Spear of Destiny look dated.

This isn't a 3D virtual reality game like Ultima Underworld II. There is no interaction with the other characters apart from shooting them. Indeed, a shoot 'em-up is what Spear of Destiny is. Think of it as 3D Pacman from inside the maze and you've got it about right. Z

What sort of self-respecting hero is called Darell?

Crystals of Arborea

AS FAR AS SCENARIOS are concerned, fantasy role-playing games are all pretty much of a muchness. You can bet your bottom dollar (sorry, pound) that whatever trouble is at hand is down to some disgruntled god or warlord, or warlock, who has stolen a vital artefact or enchanted the land or some other unspeakably evil act, and as chance would have it, there are only five or six heroes remaining in the entire world who have the necessary skills to put everything to rights. Crystals of Arborea is no exception to this rule.

Where fantasy RPGs do vary greatly is in the approach they take to the player's viewpoint, movement, combat systems, and magic. It is on the implementation of all these factors that the game will ultimately stand or fall. Unfortunately, Crystals of Arborea is not merely a faller at the first fence, it doesn't even get out of the paddock before it's flat on its proverbial face. The designers of this game have made a very brave attempt to create a workable wilderness game, but an outdoor scenario brings with it many problems, none of which have been adequately solved. For example, it becomes very difficult to keep track of exactly where you've explored, and what areas remain uncharted, so the game quickly becomes frustrating. When you add a naff combat system, and an underdeveloped magic system, you end up with a game which isn't even going to attract the most ardent RPG players.

A badly designed RPG with only its price to recommend it.

Your activities in Storm Master range from wizardry...

Storm Master

THIS IS EASILY the best of the bunch of Simarils re-releases. It's a broad strategy game set in a fantasy world in which the winds are central to the economy, culture and technology (and we'll have no schoolboy humour at this juncture thank you very much). You are the ruler of the land of Eoliä, which is constantly at war with the nearby land of Sharkaania. Your ultimate objective is to bring about the downfall of Sharkaania by looting and destroying seven enemy cities.

Achieving your aims is complicated by the fact that you can't afford to concentrate your resources entirely on warfare. You must also turn your hand to various domestic affairs, each of which is controlled by one of your councillors. Eventually, you will have enough money to design and build airships and fly them against the opposition. At this stage the game turns into a 3D shoot 'em-up.

Storm Master is a well designed juggling act of several good sub-games, and there is enough variety here to keep strategy fans happy for quite some time. A good buy for this money.

An attractively presented and absorbing strategy game.

Metal Mutants

TRANSFORMING ROBOTS are a bit passé these days, but they were hot news when this game first took to the streets. The hero of this scrolling shoot 'em-up/beat 'em-up/chew 'em-up is one such beast, and it comes in three forms. If you haven't already guessed, these three forms each deal out different punishments to the creatures they encounter. One beats, one shoots, and one chews (or breathes fire if he's feeling really pissed off).

Your objective is to trundle, walk or stomp through a selection of nightmarish environments populated by a selection of nightmarish creatures and basically bump them off in the most efficient fashion you can. What this really boils down to is working out which of your three robot types is best suited to the job of dispatching each type of enemy creature. Before you get too excited I ought to warn you that it sounds a lot more scintillating than it actually is. In fact the only thing that scintillates in this game is the gleaming bodywork of the robots. The rest, I'm sorry to say, is as dull as ditchwater.

Party on down in Heroquest.

Which way now.

Another one bites the dust.

Heroquest

THERE ARE MANY advantages to converting a board game to computer format. You can add pretty animated graphics and sound, the computer can function as an opponent if you've got nobody else to play with, and there are no pieces to lose. Gremlin has taken Games Workshop's classic board game and they've added all these things. The conversion is close to perfect. Unfortunately, it's too perfect. Because Gremlin has stuck to the board game so religiously, what you have here is a very pretty and very competent version that is totally lacking in atmosphere.

The board game is a sort of greatly simplified version of popular fantasy role-playing games, only it uses cardboard layouts and plastic figures. There are four character types: Barbarian, Wizard, Elf and Dwarf, each of which has special attributes. They must play a series of increasingly difficult quests in which the modus operandi is generally explore, find treasure, kill monsters, and complete a special task such as rescuing a prisoner. As a board game it hangs together fairly well, but as a computer game it's a completely wasted opportunity to go beyond the original concept. By way of recompense, this version does at least come with the expansion kit, Return of the Witchlord, and at this price you really can't complain.

Blade Warrior

AT THE HEART OF this game is a very clever graphical idea. Instead of having the normal brightly coloured sprites for this sideways scrolling hack 'em-up, the designer, Jason Kingsley, rendered all of the scenery and the main characters as silhouettes. The result looks very striking indeed, even though it's all rendered in just 16 colours. So far so good, unfortunately Mr Kingsley neglected to include any gameplay, so once you've spent five seconds admiring the graphics there's nothing left to do but put it back in the box and play something else instead. If you do decide to persevere (and I really admire you for your patience), you'll find a lacklustre game involving a lot of poorly designed combat and some trading with wizards, followed by yet more poorly designed combat.

A Flight For Two In A Hot Air Balloon

Plus A Canon Megazoom 76

Judy Garland did it in Oz. Richard Branson does it over the Atlantic. And of course Lemmings do it all the time. Now you too can experience the thrills of hot air ballooning.

High Flyers

PSYGNOSIS HAVE released the hot sequel to their high flying classic Lemmings, the imaginatively titled Lemmings 2. The game has a basketful of new characters including a ballooning Lemming who gets to those high up places that other Lemmings can't reach.

To celebrate the launch of Lemmings 2 and unable to resist a tenuous link when they see one, Psygnosis and PC Zone have got together to release a pretty smart competition.

Winner Takes All

The winner and a friend (or a complete stranger they bumped into in the Dog And Duck the night before) will get the chance to go on an Adventure Balloons flight. Before the flight you'll get the chance to assist in the inflation of the balloon then it's up, up and away for an hour's flight over the countryside.

And since memories are made of pictures the winner will also be getting a rather fabulous Cannon Megazoom Camera on which to capture all the fun.

And what do you need to win these fab prizes? Simply answer the three questions below, fill in the form and send it to:

Balloon With A View, PC Zone, 19 Bolsover Street, London W1P 7HJ.

1 Which of the following characters does not appear in the original Lemmings?

- a) Blocker Lemming
- b) Smoker Lemming
- c) Basher Lemming

2 What was the name of Nina's annoyingly hummable hit?

- a) 99 Red Balloons
- b) 99 Blue Lemmings
- c) 99 Number Ones

3 Which band does Lemmy play for? (Tenuous. Ed)

- a) Earth Wind And Fire
- b) Motorhead
- c) The Nolans

Buzz Aldrin's Race into Space

USSR

USA

Mark Burgess swaps the hard stuff for the right stuff in a bid to get himself into orbit

BUZZ ALDRIN'S RACE INTO SPACE', says the manual, puts you 'in command of your country's space programme'. Great, I thought, time to dust off Blue Streak and tell the chaps at Woomera to look busy. But no; the manual assumes you are an American. You are in charge of one of the silliest episodes of catch-as-catch-can ever played by the world's superpowers.

It is a strategy game that enables you to play the part of either the US or the USSR (as was).

At the Preferences screen you can choose which side to play, the level of difficulty, astronauts and whether you play the computer or a fellow human. A large icon at the bottom lets you play a historical or a custom game. Other icons take care of the usual sound/music on/off.

After Preferences click on the seal of office and a news reader appears and tells you what's going on. Americans have Carter Walcrite (geddit?) but Russians have the glamorous, Californian-looking, Svetlana Izvestia.

Now you can get on with playing the game. It starts in Spring 1957 and you have twenty years in which to land astronauts on the moon and get them back in one piece.

You're shown a picture of your spaceport. This starts off looking like a small industrial estate, but as the game progresses and the admin. spend money on filing cabinets and colour co-ordinated 'phones it begins to look like Milton Keynes. Click on the buildings to enter them and get the whole thing moving.

The panel on the right shows what you start off with (Soviet equivalent in red, in brackets)...

Tactics

You must get an early lead and keep it. This will panic your opponent into taking risks and launching things before they're ready (a bit like software houses). All his rockets will blow up and he will be shot. Great. How to do it?

Break down your task into a series of short term

REVIEW

The glamorous Svetlana Izvestia. Shame you couldn't get out with Powers.

Kruschev exercises his management skills: time for the bottle of vodka and a revolver.

Treat him with the respect that every member of the HUAC is entitled to.

An early Cape Canaveral. It's up to you to put it on the map.

Preference screen — set up the game from here

Put the Vostok on the A-series rocket, light the fuse, retire.

1 ADMINISTRATION

Administration is where most of the work is done — so you can see how realistic this game is. At the budget office you can see how much you have spent so far and an intelligence estimate of your opponent's budget. Go to hardware purchase to spend more dosh. You start with 60 MB — mega bucks not megabytes. With this you can start development programmes and buy useful things like rockets and satellites.

There is an important strategy element here: what you buy should be influenced by what your opponent is doing (keeping up with the Jones'/ Ivanovs) and your own long term aims. Remember to develop programmes in order. It's easier (and more efficient) to develop the Titan series after you've got the Atlas up to scratch.

From hardware purchase you can go to Research & Development. Assign teams of speccies — as big as you can afford — to your programmes. Your kit is fairly unreliable at first so the more money you spend here the less time you'll have to spend at funerals.

Future missions is where you plan the next season's launches. On your first turn you will be planning for Autumn 1957. Choose what type of mission from the menu, and don't run before you can walk. A neat graphic display shows the mission and a box rating the risk from A-Okay to danger. The missions are assigned to particular launch pads. You start off with one but can later buy up to a staggering three.

The program will not let you schedule planetary missions if, by the following season, those planets would be in the wrong position.

Astronaut recruiting is where you... but you guessed already. You can't recruit any on your first turn (what could they do? Where would they live?) After that, build your team up, put them through training and look after them. They will respond with high morale and more prestige for you. You can view (and alter) the attributes — in the RPG sense — of your astronauts. Aldrin, incidentally, has a suitably modest set.

Preferences takes you back to the first screen and time capsule is just a fancy name for the usual load/save/quit menu. Exit Administration does just what you'd think.

2 RESEARCH & DEVELOPMENT

Here you can find out the current safety level of your hardware and how much it would cost to improve it. Each programme has a maximum safety level that can only be improved upon by an actual space mission.

3 LAUNCH FACILITY

See what missions are scheduled. You can scrub a mission if you've had second thoughts but you will lose prestige points for wimping out. If a rocket has blown up and destroyed the launch pad here is where you rebuild it. But it will cost time and money.

4 VIEWING STAND

This gives a record of your missions and a digest of the news.

5 VEHICLE ASSEMBLY (VEHICLE INTEGRATION)

Once you've developed the programme, bought all the hardware and done the R & D you need to put the hardware and payload together.

6 MISSION CONTROL

From the control room you watch the countdown and the launch on the big screens. Digitised speech and film makes this the best bit of the game. If you're playing the USSR you get a countdown in Russian — at least, I assume that's what it is. Play for the home team and you get much more — all systems go, ignition sequence and the favourite 'We have lift-off!'

7 MUSEUM OF SPACE HISTORY

This contains displays — including films — of past missions and efficiency, including your own.

8 PENTAGON (K.G.B. HEADQUARTERS)

Chat to your friendly spooks for reports, briefings and blurred photographs. Although intelligence briefings are not the same thing as intelligent briefings, this is your only chance to see what the other guy is doing.

9 WASHINGTON'S MONUMENT (ST BASIL CATHEDRAL)

For those of you who always wanted a Mac. This icon does nothing useful at all.

10 CAPITOL BUILDING (THE KREMLIN)

Headmaster's study in other words. This is where you get bawled out by LBJ or Krushchev. You can even get sacked (in US) or shot (in USSR). On the other hand if you've been good you get more money and a pat on the back.

11 ARLINGTON CEMETERY (THE KREMLIN WALL)

This is where you bury your mistakes. Don't make too many or you're for the chop (literally in the USSR).

12 TRACKING STATION

This icon just tells you what a tracking station does. For Mr. Cursor.

13 FLAG POLE

This ends your turn.

"In one mission I was taken out and shot on the orders of Krushchev because I wasn't liaising. I'd also killed a few cosmonauts..."

goals. Skipping 'milestone' missions will save time but leads to inexperienced, unhappy astronauts. Be ruthless about what programmes to support. If it's not going to lead to the moon, forget it. If you try and develop long term programmes too soon, you'll end up in a long R & D phase while your opponent surges ahead.

Should you get left behind, don't panic. Don't launch risky, high profile missions. They will blow up and everyone will hate you. It is better to use the intelligence services and analyse why he's so far ahead. Use lunar satellites to skip future manned lunar missions. Attract extra funds and prestige with safe unmanned missions.

Use every turn wisely. Buy hardware and new programmes from admin. Then initiate R & D and plan future missions. Visit your astronauts, see how the training is getting on. Assign them to different programmes and keep them all busy and happy. Visit the Capitol or the Kremlin to see how well you are doing your job. In one game I was taken out and shot on the orders of Krushchev because I wasn't liaising properly. I'd also killed a few cosmonauts.

Check out intelligence reports, the budget and current statistics. Then assemble the hardware for any current launches and schedule the missions from mission control. Leave your turn and let the techies get on with it for six months. The other side does something and by the time you're back, you are ready to launch again.

Details, details

A huge amount of work has gone into getting everything right for this game. As time progresses, Ike is replaced with LBJ, Cape Canaveral renames itself Cape Kennedy and even social attitudes change. You can recruit all male astronauts in the fifties but not in the enlightened sixties. Not sure it happened that quickly.

The way in which you find out about your rival's programme is authentic; nothing but rumours until your satellite reports the successful building of a McDonalds on Venus.

Challenger

The program isn't as complex as, say, Civilisation. This is fine by me. It means you can begin playing and get results before you die of boredom and frustration. There are enough options to make it as challenging as you like.

In brief: Buzz Aldrin's Race Into Space is a user-friendly strategy game that simulates one of the most exciting human endeavours this century. Certainly more exciting than building a railway. The game also has a high degree of realism - you don't have to colonise planets or anything. Z

HP LASERJET III™ COMPATIBLE • FLASH ROM UPGRADEABLE!

Ricoh, the world's second largest manufacturer of laser printer engines, have used their expertise to produce a 'first' in laser printers for the world market, the LP1200 with FLASH ROM. HP LaserJet III™ compatible, the LP1200 employs industry proven laser technology. Unlike LED printers, which use light emitting diodes, the LP1200's laser light source is able to produce the most accurate and intense printed images. It has a fast efficient processor and engine, together with a straight paper path design which allows printing at a full 6 pages per minute and, it can address a range of print resolutions up to 400 dpi. The 2Mb RAM version can print a full A4 page of graphics at 300 dpi and a full A4 page of text, or A5 page of graphics, using standard internal fonts and the alternate controller firmware supplied, at 400 dpi. A free Windows driver supplied enables the 2Mb Ricoh LP1200 to print a typical page of text at 400 dpi from Windows 3.1, using the alternate controller firmware supplied on the Windows Driver Disk and standard internal resident fonts. The 4Mb RAM version has the added advantage of being able to print a full A4 page of graphics at 400 dpi and makes full use of the LP1200's 400 dpi printing capabilities, such as using Microsoft Windows fonts.

Unique additional standard features include FLASH ROM 'future proof' technology and LAYOUT - a powerful document description language. The LP1200's unique internal FLASH ROM, which holds the printer controller firmware, can easily be updated as new developments in technology occur. This protects the investment you make in buying a Ricoh LP1200. Other manufacturers would require you to buy a new printer! Internal FLASH ROM and industry standard FLASH ROM IC cards can also be used to permanently store fonts, macros, graphics and extra emulations. Again, unlike the competition, the LP1200 includes LAYOUT a powerful document description language as standard, which offers unique opportunities to develop custom made printing systems. Forms and document templates can be designed and stored electronically in the LP1200's FLASH ROM, alleviating the need for pre-printed forms!

The LP1200 comes complete with a 100 sheet A4 paper tray and the facility to feed single sheets of paper and card up to 157gsm. An optional extra universal feeder provides the facility to automatically feed up to 150 sheets, from sizes of 98mm x 148mm to 216mm x 356mm in size, at weights of up to 158gsm. It can also feed up to 15 envelopes, overhead transparencies and labels automatically.

THE LP1200 IS A GENUINE LASER PRINTER AND NOT AN LED PRINTER.
MAKE SURE YOU CHECK THE COMPETITION!

Veil Of Darkness

Vampire blood lust is all the rage these days, and not wanting to miss out on blood or lust, Andy Clerkson wrapped a scarf round his neck, stuck garlic up his nostrils and set out to shed some light on Veil of Darkness.

Here I am in the picturesque valley of Romania. Loads to do and see. Weather's not that great but the night life's rockin'; there's various nutters, zombies, werewolves, banshees, blood sucking vamps and rat-eating, smelly acned locals. Having a great time. Wish you were here. P.S Don't forget to water the plants - I've grown quite attached to vegetation over here.

TALKING BACK

The old hag tries to lead me astray with talk of Ambrose but I know who she really is.

So I let her have it with a cutting word...

The conversations in Veil feel more realistic than in many RPGs as you respond to single words that are highlighted in the text. But the key to solving Veil is in the hidden key word. But be careful, if you're daft enough to call the most beautiful dame in the game a werewolf, then suffer a swift rebuke and lose your chance of a quick snog round the back of the mausoleum.

No luck there then. And she wasn't the beautiful dame mentioned in the intro.

LET'S FACE IT, 1993 is a good year for heavy necking; the two pronged, sink and suck hickey is back in a big way. And I'm not talking about the embarrassing bluey black blotch you hide from your friends by pulling out your old polo neck jumper. I'm talking vampires, the undead, Nosferatu. You've read about them in the mags, seen them in the movies and now whaddaya know, they're on your PC screen. So in the best 'if you can't beat 'em, eat 'em' tradition, reach for the garlic crusher, grab a steak (That's stake. - Ed) and settle down to a hearty feast of role playing action adventure with Veil of Darkness.

In Veil you take on the Van Helsing role of vampire slayer, albeit unwillingly. Flying over darkest Romania, your plane is brought down by a vicious thunderstorm and you are rescued by friendly (?) villagers. You wake up to the delightful face of the poetically named Deirdre and all is bright and beautiful - until you find out that Deirdre still lives with her dad. He spins you some old yarn about going over to a neighbour's house to pick up a hammer for him and you soon realise all is dark and ominous. The neighbour has been spread all over his front room by a lunatic killer and everyone else in the village is either ignorant, pissed, on the pull or just downright ugly. Your first puzzle is to retrieve the hammer and as this done you learn why the villagers are so damn weird. The evil Kairn, vamp extraordinaire, has held the village in his disgusting, slimy grip for centuries now, feeding off of the blood of the locals, banning the use of garlic - you know the score. To top this off, the only way to get out of this hell hole is to fulfil some prophecy that Deirdre's dad gives to you. You are the chosen one and funnily enough, its up to you to save the valley.

Clickety click

Veil of Darkness is a point and click affair. Unlike most RPG's, you don't have look, grab, open etc. icons, but it is extremely easy to move around - to talk to a character just position the cursor over their head, click and you're in a conversation; to pick something up, walk over to it, click and you've got it. This saves you from endlessly interchanging between actions, but it does make the searching for items a tad too easy. If you walk into a room, anything you need is lying there on the floor, no need to really search. And if you have the magnify objects option on, you can't help but find stuff - you walk into a room and bingo, there's a six foot candle. That's just for cheats though, innit.

Yackity yack

But digging up items from dingy nooks and crannies isn't the name of the game in Veil. Talking back is. Whenever you come across a character, you can bet your last garlic clove, they have a dodgy secret or gory story to tell. As you click on a character, a dialogue box sprouts up with a passage that has a word or two underlined. Clicking on these key words reveals a follow on conversation relating to that word, though to solve the game you also need to type in your own words to spark off a bit of intelligent banter - hint: typing "Shut up you po-faced git and just tell me where the vampire lives" doesn't work - I... er... tried it. You need a word that you have gleaned, using all your powers of reasoning and perception to garner a telling piece of info. This feature adds a lot more to the role playing part of the game than simply replying with a list of pre-determined phrases.

Out and about in Romania

SCREEN 1 Hanging out in the local boozier, I hear of a gypsy camp, and go up there to meet a nice young lady called Marje. I cross her palm with silver, and all of sudden she grabs my arm and starts pulling me over towards her. I say look Marje, I'm spoken for and before she can get me to the altar, I'm outta there with a key to some maze.

SCREEN 2 The mazes in Veil are superb and full of grimy creatures. These bats aren't a problem, but look out for the vampiresses. The valley map icon (bottom right of the screen) turns into a map of my route which highlights any ground I have already covered – if you have a printer, save time by printing the map of the maze when completed for reference later.

SCREEN 3 I just can't seem to keep out of the pub you know. At least, the miserable old git behind the bar is finally pouring me a drink though. Make it a large one mate, and I'll have the gilt glass if you don't mind. Cheers.

SCREEN 4 Just my luck, one drink and I just don't care. So what happens? I end up in monastery with a pervy old monk and a naked geezer standing in a puddle. Vampires? I'm more worried about the freaky masons. But I have solved a part of the prophecy and for that I reckon I deserve a drink. Cup of Holy Water anyone?

Later in Romania, still alive

SCREEN 5 Where did I put that little old candle of mine? Oh look there it is, hasn't it got big. Searching through the swamp I've turned the magnify objects option on because it's 4.00am and my eyes are completely shot.

SCREEN 6 Would you credit it, another murder, just when I was getting all pleased with myself too. My suspicion is that it's a werewolf. Why? Because that's just about the way things have been going around here lately.

SCREEN 7 Over in the cemetery things don't get any better. What with the skeletons and this fat, red bloke I don't know which way to turn. The giant conker comes in handy with the skeletons and old red face just keeps stammering at me, moaning about some curse. Come to think of it, on a night like this, what the hell am I doing in a cemetery anyway? I'm a fool to myself.

SCREEN 8 Finally, I make it up to the castle of Kairn, the evil lord vampire. I've faced werewolves, banshees, ghosts, bats, black slugs that look like the lost gothic children of the Baba Papa family. These have tried to slurp me, eat me, age me, turn me into a pile of dust or just plain bite my head off. But I made it, and it's out with the Paul Daniels bag-o-tricks. And there's just one thing to say to Kairn, "You want some, mate!"

INVENTORY

1 HIT POINTS AND ENCUMBRANCE Clicking on this shows how much damage you can do when fighting and how much excess baggage you are carrying.

2 CHARACTER PORTRAIT Of no importance really but it does show what a handsome geezer you are.

3 COFFIN As you lose strength, you turn into a bag o' bones. You can build up muscle though if you munch on the right herbs and get a good drink inside ya.

4 INVENTORY You'll need to pack loads of stuff to get through this one, and that means sacks within sacks within sacks...

5 HAND ACTION ICONS This is where the doing's done – top to use, bottom to throw.

7 PROPHECY It's all down here in writing and you're the one to be lumbered with the 'Chosen One' moniker, verily you will fulfil thy destiny.

8 BLESSINGS AND CURSES Doesn't look good – I've been cursed with terminally red eyes, grey hair, walking with a stick and standing in a poncey hands-on-hips stance for too long.

9 CHARACTER'S BODY I'd always wondered where Freddie went when he left Scooby Doo's gang. Fine figure of a man ready for vampire slaying: armed to the teeth, got a sack full of important stuff, and wearing that smart medallion to impress all those gorgeous Romanian babes.

10 CONTENTS OF SACK By using sacks you can carry all those necessary items like keys, money, books and lots of weed – but don't overload yourself.

As you talk to characters they will tell you about other places on the game map, opening those places up for you to explore. Veil gives you many places to explore early in the game, so you shouldn't get stuck in one scenario twiddling your thumbs for too long.

Monster mashing

Of course, it's not all idle chat since you manage to get involved in much gratuitous violence along the way (otherwise the game might resemble normal life... God forbid). There's the usual plethora of wolves, bats and zombies, along with more exotic creations like banshees and will-o-the-wisps (unfortunately none of the will-o-the-wisps talk like Kenneth Moore – now that would be scary). Fighting off Kairn's evil hordes is easy if you know how – if you don't know how, you're punting up poo pond. Basically, you need to discover the perfect tool to kill each creature. Combat can be encountered in easy, simplified and full mode: the easier the mode the more damage you can inflict on your opponent with each hit. Any injuries you suffer can be cured with a few new-age herbal remedies if you know your mushrooms from your sneezewort plant.

Although the graphics aren't stunning (on the overhead map they're slightly bitmapped), the detail is excellent and moody. Atmosphere is a prerequisite for a good bit of role playing and adventure and Veil even outdoes Pontins in this respect (difficult to believe, but it's true). Sound effects are excellent, especially when you reduce skeletons to a pile of rubble and the digitised speech in the dusky Eastern European dialect will have you wandering around going Ha Ha Ha Ha! until your head explodes.

The SSI designers have done an excellent job with Veil, giving you scope to choose your own style of play, whether that leans more to the role playing or the adventure side of things (it favours the RPG side, as the combat sequences are not advanced). But don't make it too easy for yourself, it's addictive but there are not a lot of puzzles to solve and you could be putting Veil back in its coffin before many nights hath passed. Z

The evil one has a projector in his tummy so he can watch you suffer.

The hitherto unknown dangers of kamikaze bat-infested flight paths.

The map you'll need to negotiate the sewer system. Mmmm, can't wait.

By The Order

There are four basic order types available at most stages of the battle:

DEPLOY Move to the indicated position and prepare for further orders.

HOLD Maintain and defend your current position.

ASSAULT Mount an attack on the indicated position.

WITHDRAW Pull back from your current position.

The whole basis of computer wargaming is under attack. Last year, MicroProse UK began to plan an offensive against the stuffy conservatism of hardcore wargame designers. The strength of the opposition to this advance was daunting, but as this new approach to an old genre appears on the horizon, it becomes apparent that hex grids and standard military symbols are about to be dealt a crushing blow. Laurence Scottford reports from the front line.

YOU STAND nervously in the hazy warmth of a summer evening. Ahead of you, and curving away in a broad semi-circle to your right is a heavy mass of bodies: men and horses engaged in a bloody mêlée that has already left scores of bodies in its wake. The air is thick with the sharp reports of gunfire, and the thudding of horses hooves on the tortured turf, but neither of these sounds can drown out the screams and moans of dying men and horses.

You pray that your time will come soon. It is better to die fighting than only to stand and witness the carnage. And there it is – the command rings out and you begin to shuffle forward up the hill towards the waiting allied army.

Progress is slow and steady, then there is a sudden cry and you look across to your right as your fellow grenadiers breast the summit of the hill at the farm of La Haie Sainte and crush the first line of British troops. Spurred on, you and your comrades carve a wedge almost as far as the Ohain road. Your confidence is running high when there is a sudden silence and the men around you stop moving forward. You panic and follow half a dozen stares to the left.

Redcoats! Where did they come from so suddenly? You have no time to ponder your predicament before a hail of bullets flies through the company. The soldier next to you screams horribly as a lead pellet rips into his arm and shatters the bone, splashing your grimy face with a dark gore. The firing brigade disappears in a cloud of musket smoke and your compatriots make one further attempt to push forward, but more go down under a second storm of lead. With an anguished cry you turn on your heels and take the only sane action that is left to you – run... run for your life!

So began the end of the Corsican Ogre's reign of terror. When Wellington commanded Maitland's Guards to rise from their concealed position and fire at point blank range into the oncoming French troops even Napoleon's trusted Old Guard were forced to flee the front line, pursued by bayonet-wielding allied troops. Or were they? For the very first time, games players, be they hardened wargamers or newcomers to the genre, have the opportunity to rewrite the history books in a way that recreates the atmosphere and realities of the battle of Waterloo.

The World in Miniature

Tabletop wargamers have long been accustomed to seeing the world laid out in miniature before them when they recreate historical battles. When low-cost microcomputers became available it was only natural that wargame fanatics would want to use them as a new medium for fighting hypothetical wars, but, because of the graphical limitations of the machines, they resorted to using standard military symbols to denote the type, size and position of troops.

Since then, the graphic and sound capabilities of PCs have advanced tremendously. Sadly, computer wargames haven't. There are still publishers that churn out game after game with lacklustre, symbolic graphics, and no sound to speak of. Dr. Peter Turcan went some way toward rectifying the problem when he introduced his 3D Battlefield system, but his games were still aimed at hardcore wargamers and featured an unfriendly parser rather than a point and click interface. Now MicroProse is about to put an end to all that. Fields of Glory is the first wargame to use a sophisticated graphics system in which foot soldiers are represented by miniature foot soldiers and cavalry by animated mounted soldiers. All commands are issued using the mouse, and there are even authentic battlefield sounds. A breath of fresh air is about to revive computer wargaming.

One Hundred Days

Fields of Glory takes as its theme Napoleon's 100 days campaign which began after his arrival in France, following his departure from Elba on 26 February 1815, and ended with his defeat at Waterloo on 18 June 1815. Four major historical battles are fought in this campaign: Ligny, Quatre Bras, Waterloo and Wavre. There are also two hypothetical tutorial battles, one in which a single French corps faces a single Allied corps and the other in which two French corps face two Prussian corps. These battles are to allow the player to get accustomed to playing the game, and to learn the mechanics of Napoleonic Warfare in general.

The game can be played as a series of individual battles or as a full campaign.

The campaign is played on a 250 mile map in which flags represent leaders of divisions and corps. In this mode corps can be ordered to move to particular towns or areas. Victory conditions will vary from game to game, thus preventing this from becoming a one-play product. All small skirmishes that occur in this mode are handled automatically by the computer but whenever a major engagement takes place the player can choose whether or not to be pitched into the thick of it.

Let Battle Commence

Battles default to an eight mile map, but the player can also switch to maps at a scale of 32 miles, four miles or one mile at any stage of the battle. Once the battle begins you can choose to accept the historical deployment of troops or to deploy them yourself. At this level troops are represented by miniature men, moving around on a contoured landscape with buildings, roads, woods and rivers all correctly placed.

Unlike most wargames, which are turn based, the battles in Fields of Glory occur in condensed real-time, so the player becomes aware of the constant ebb and flow of battles at close quarters. There is even a realistic time delay between the giving of orders and their being carried out.

Foregone Conclusion

Fields of Glory should revolutionise the wargame genre by dragging it out of the domain of enthusiasts and into the appreciation of the general games player. It looks very much like Wellington and Napoleon could both have their finest hours again this summer, and because the system is generic and easily applied to other areas of war history, many more generals will hopefully see their victories and defeats recreated in the near future. Z

A Good Pedigree

The creators of Fields of Glory have all come from backgrounds that make them the ideal people to create such a revolutionary game. Jim Bambra, who came up with the original concept and co-designed the game, has been a keen wargamer for some years and worked for Games Workshop where he had a hand in designing the popular Warhammer rules. His co-designer, Adrian Earle, is also a keen wargamer and has created his own PBM game. The main programmer, Steven Green, was previously with ODE and worked on Pacific Islands and Team Yankee. The design team also had a lot of advice from MicroProse's German sales manager, Peter Hofschroer. Strange? Not when you discover that Hofschroer is an acknowledged world expert on the subject, with many books to his credit!

Napoléon Bonaparte
Emperor of the French
Dates: 1769-1821
Command: Army Commander

Professional: 5
Personality: 4
Leadership: 5
Health: 0

The greatest modern military career began when Napoleon was commissioned into the artillery after Military school. Intensive study of tactics paid off in the recapture of Toulon, and his 'whiff of grapeshot' won him the gratitude of Barras, leader of the Directory, who gave him command of the army in Italy and then in Egypt. Huge military success was the basis of his coup d'état in 1799 and assumption of the Imperial Throne in 1804. In turn, unanswerable control of France fuelled his military conquests and his ambitions for a European Empire. His military skills were based on a profound knowledge of tactics, rapidly and mathematically precision in manoeuvres and a flair for finding the enemy's weakness and punishing it. Napoleon's chief physical characteristic was his energy; his steady form bustled along between the points of action, and the chaos of a battlefield took meaningful

Facing The Facts

Not only is Fields of Glory a superb wargame, it comes complete with an extensive database. This contains accurate and complete orders of battle and biographies of commanders down to divisional level. All the main commanders are represented with accurate facial portraits, and the colours shown for each division are historically accurate.

Formation Lancing

Just to prove how realistic the whole system is, if you use historically proven tactics you should find that they work. There are a range of formations available to you: Column (for movement and assault), Line (which gives you more firepower but less cohesion), Skirmish (restricted to light troops, this formation is a loose line, more vulnerable to close assault), Square (a defence against cavalry charges) and Mixed (a combination of column and line). Two more formations are created by circumstance. Poor is a loose formation that occurs when crossing difficult terrain or coming under heavy fire, and Rout is a widely scattered formation of fleeing troops.

Patrician

PUBLISHER: Ascon

PRICE: £34.99

TELEPHONE: 071 490 2944

OUT: June

As he gets progressively older, fatter and balder Paul Lakin is looking less like an angry young man and more like a fat cat businessman. Positively Patrician in fact.

FOR THE UNINITIATED the Hanseatic League may sound like the German equivalent of the Vauxhall Conference. However it was in fact a loose trading confederation of medieval cities based largely within the area of modern day Germany. The towns really marked the beginning of the end of the feudal era with the rise in wealth and importance of the merchant class. The league itself was pretty well crippled by the Thirty Years War (war might be good for business but it's lousy for trade) but in its time it was the economic hub of central Europe and beyond.

Patrician, developed in Germany by Ascon, is an attempt to capture the feel of this era. You start life as a humble merchant with one ship and a small amount of money. However the world is your oyster and with skilled trading, the right amount of patronage and a judicious bit of sucking up you might end up as Mayor of your city from where you can reach the dizzy heights of Alderman or Patrician of the Hanseatic League.

To reach the level of Patrician you'll need to master a vast range of fields. Not only trade but politics, combat, ship building, marriage... the list is endless. Well it's not really endless, that's just a cheap journalistic way of getting out of actually listing all the options. So to give you some idea of the scope of the game here's a look at the options open to you from the main street.

THE STREET

The centre of the town, where it all happens. Well to be honest not much happens except some seagulls wing their way past you. However it's from here that you access the main action of the game.

SHIPYARD

You start Patrician with a fairly basic ship. As the game moves on you'll want to keep coming back here for repairs and of course bigger, more grandiose sailing vessels.

THE OFFICE

The office is your headquarters and the nerve centre of the game. From here you can keep an eye on your inventory, check up on the general situation of the town and access two of the most crucial game screens.

THE LEDGER

This book is where it all happens, it enables you to buy and sell goods and also keep a keen eye on what goods the town has a surplus or shortage of. It's this information which guides which goods you buy or sell in which town.

THE MAP

Once your ship is fully laden, the map allows you to select its destination. It's just like Treasure Hunt!

THE BANK

"Neither a lender nor a borrower be," might be sound moral advice but you're not going to get very far in Patrician if you follow it. At the bank you can negotiate rates of interest and length of loans as well as offer loans yourself. Ah the sin of usury.

THE INN

Of course the upwardly mobile man of affairs doesn't have time to hang around in pubs discussing Bremen Town's chances against Hildesheim Utd in the Hanseatic Cup. However the Inn is a vital location, it's here that you recruit crew for your ships, employees for your offices and - if you fancy living a bit dangerously - pirates.

THE MARKET PLACE

Ah, the earthy hustle and bustle of the medieval market. You're probably rather above that sort of thing, as you swan around town in your ermine lined carriage. Still this is the place to check out the word on the street (was that we heil or we hate that the crowd were yelling to you?) If you're as popular as a tax collector then throwing a little (or big) feast might be a good idea.

THE CHURCH

Strictly speaking the Medieval Church disapproved of excessive wealth creation particularly when the money wasn't earned through labour. However the church has never let anything as minor as theology get in the way of the fast buck. As an image conscious merchant you'll come here to buy indulgences for your sins and patronise the beggars.

THE TOWN HALL

This is where you dabble in some serious toadying as you try to pay your way into a Guild. You can also trade in ships and information... or simply admire the architecture.

Would you buy a used wife off this man?

General Accounting

There's far too much going on in Patrician to show everything here (besides we haven't got pictures of all of it). As well as all this trading malarkey you need to go to The Bath House for some underhand political dealings (and to get clean of course), deal with a marriage broker and fight off pirates on the high seas. And that's just for starters. As you get more into the game there's more game for you to get into since the higher the rank the greater the responsibility. The Mayor has to worry about the town's survival as well as his own. Ah it's lonely at the top. So they say.

It's important when launching a new magazine to blag as much stuff as possible by running features on different desirable items in your early issues. Last month it was soundcards; this month it's joysticks and next month it will be rent-controlled flats in central London. It's also important to pick someone to do it who's too thick to keep all the best ones for themselves: naturally we plumped for our resident moron, Patrick McCarthy.

FIRST OF ALL this feature is not pretending to be the definitive guide to every available joystick. Try to see it, instead, as a leisurely stroll through the dense, aromatic and spoor-littered jungle of joystickdom, with the occasional pause to sniff the odd dropping or two.

There are so many PC joysticks about that it's impossible to include them all in one feature – and we're certainly not going to try, largely because one, we really can't be bothered to do so; and two, some of the people who said they'd send us stuff didn't get it to us in time for the article's deadline. Won't they feel silly when their direct competitors are praised to the high heavens? Not that I'm bitter about it, or anything. Anyway, if you have a particular joystick that you think is the absolute biz and you'd like to see in our next joystick feature (which should appear shortly after we break all these ones) why not send it in to us, and we'll do what we can to keep it.

Anyway, let's move seamlessly into the feature itself. "What tremendous scientific principles and methods," you're probably saying to yourself, "were utilised to ensure that these joysticks were fully and accurately tested?"

"Ha-ha and ha-hee," I can reply, somewhat smugly as it happens, "The Happenstance Theory was fully invoked, as indeed was King Ludd's open-minded approach to innovative machinery and Mahatma Ghandi's non-violent-resistance techniques to people who tried to steal the things from my desk." (Mr Ghandi did not hit people with a cricket bat. Ed) Alright, I adapted the technique a little. To balance all this, I also had a "control" experiment running, whereby the games were played without the use of any hardware at all, just by staring at the screen and hoping.

What happened was this: joysticks arrived in box; box got ripped open with a passion that only someone who never got any presents as a child can muster; joysticks were grabbed by greedy PCZ staff; PCZ staff were beaten back by determined campaigner for consumer affairs; campaigner fled building with joysticks; campaigner got run over by large articulated lorry outside building.

This is when our crack squad took over. We tested the joysticks, joypad and joystickingwheel, playing arcade games, platform games, flight sims, sports games and driving games where possible and appropriate, and attempted to have sex with them if their shape was particularly evocative.

Everything's been marked out of five for their ergonomics, their value for money and how good they'd look stuffed down your pants. We haven't bothered marking on looks because we have no taste whatsoever. Overall marks are out of ten. The comparative colour co-ordinated bar-chart I was working on got stolen from me and ripped up by some bullies on the bus and I haven't got any sellotape and anyway they ate a bit of it. ☒

CHEETAH ARGOSTICK

Claims to have a "futuristic" as well as an ergonomic design. As everyone knows, futuristic is just another word for "lacking taste." Obviously it's intended to look like something from Alien, and I can't help wondering what made them think the average PC gamesplayer would be attracted to that – it seems more suitable for an eight-year old. Has a very loose feel, which doesn't help in a flight sim and is even worse for action games. Despite their claims, it feels distinctly un-ergonomic, too.

Features: throttle control, X and Y trim control, buttons on base and stick, "quick fire" button, microswitches

Ergonomics: ① ②

Value for money: ① ② ③

For: Might be useful for scaring small children

Against: Looks, feel and blister-producing capability

Price: £24.99

KONIX SPEED KING (ANALOGUE)

Allegedly an "ergonomic" design which actually doesn't fit the hand very well. Lack of a base means both hands are needed to use it, so it's completely useless for any games which involve using both stick and keyboard controls – i.e. flight sims. It's a shame, because it's presumably an analogue version for those very games, and it actually has quite a good feel when flying. Ah well.

Features: Er... nothing, really.

Ergonomics: ① ②

Value for money: ① ②

For: Nice "feel" when flying

Against: The shape

Price: £14.99

Produced by: Konix

CHEETAH TURBO FIGHTER

You have to have a certain amount of courage to use this: what will your friends say if they catch you playing with a joystick that's bigger than your PC? It's obviously only intended for flight sims, so we didn't do anything wacky like play 4D Sports Boxing with it. It has a reasonable feel to sideways movements, but pulling back takes too much effort, and it's impossible to use without the clamp provided. It's quite tiring too, because you can't rest the weight of your arms on the handles without risking sending your plane into a screaming dive. It's also worth noting that not many flight sims support a yoke.

Features: throttle control, centring adjuster

Ergonomics: ① ② ③

Value for money: ① ②

For: Can rest a cup of tea on the top of it

Against: People laugh at you when you use it

Price: £49.99

CHEETAH POWERPLAY

This is quite a nice joystick, with a smallish stick that encourages you to hold it with your fingertips. It has a similar feel to the Kraft, and quite a nice touch for flight sims, with just about the right amount of tension in the stick. It seemed fine on driving games, too, but my natural caution prevented me from giving it everything on 4D Sports Boxing, as it feels quite fragile.

Features: X and Y axis trim control

Ergonomics: ① ② ③

Value for money: ① ② ③ ④

For: Quite a good stick for the money

Against: Shortish lead

Price: £24.99

KONIX SPEED KING (DIGITAL)

Same shape as the analogue version, but this is one of the few digital PC sticks available, and is intended for sports and action games and general bashing about. It's certainly sturdy enough, but the shape makes it difficult to hold and make violent movements – the effort required ensured my left forearm ached like jiggery after three fights in 4D Sports Boxing. The other problem is that you need to hold the stick pretty tightly to enable yourself to whack the stick about, and it's hard to do that without using the fingers you need to press the fire buttons: generally I find that a pistol grip works better for digital hand-helds.

Features: None.

Ergonomics: ① ②

Value for money: ① ②

For: very sturdy

Against: the shape

EUROMAX MS500

This has one of the widest range of movement on a joystick that I've seen. To make a right turn in a flight sim you have to virtually put your hand out the window, and to climb you find the top of the stick in your lap. It's fairly smooth, and I suppose the amount of movement might be good exercise for the more sedentary among us, but it doesn't live up to its claim of being "two sticks in one" at all. Thoroughly unrecommended for action games.

Features: X and Y axis trim control; throttle control; auto fire; microswitches

Ergonomics: ② ② ③

Value for money: ① ②

For: Good callanetics potential

Against: Not for use in small rooms

Price: £19.99

Produced by: Euromax

Tel: 0262 601006

CH FLIGHTSTICK

This award-winning stick has a massive base that, when combined with the spring-free movement of the stick, produces a very stable feel. It's very comfortable and has a good, accurate and responsive feel, probably thanks to the central "rolling-bar" type... er... mounting thing that the stick's attached to and that the Euromax MS500 got slightly wrong. Outstanding for flight sims; not for action and platform games.

Features: throttle control and X and Y axis trim control

Ergonomics: ① ② ③ ④ ⑤

Value for money: ① ② ③ ④ ⑤

For: The best flight-sim stick we tested

SUNCOM COMMAND CONTROL PAD

This seems to be an attempt to bring all the thrills of owning a Super NES to the PC. Why anyone would want to do that is beyond me, but there you go. I've got nothing against joypads – some of my best friends are joypads – but they're very easy to get wrong, and this is an awful one.

Responsiveness from the directional pad is so poor that even moving between items on a menu can be a pain – changing direction or selecting angles in a hurry is virtually impossible, and you need both hands to do it. Even good joypads cause horrendous cases of "Nintendo thumb" – imagine what this would do.

Features: auto-fire and simultaneous-fire buttons

Ergonomics: ①

Value for money: ①

For: Useful for wedging under the leg of a wobbly desk

Against: It's crap

Price: £19.99

Produced by: Suncom

KRAFT PREMIUM III

Despite its rather insignificant looks, this is a good joystick. It's definitely a finesse, "fingertip control" type, with a nice feel, good responsiveness and centring, and it's very accurate. Although the build quality is good it probably won't take a great deal of violent whacking about, so this should be borne in mind if you occasionally allow yourself the odd spot of violence.

Features: X and Y axis trim control; free or auto-centring stick

Ergonomics: ① ② ③ ④

Value for money: ① ② ③ ④

For: Excellent flight-sim stick

Against: Not recommended for clumsy bastards

SUNCOM FX2000

The big selling point for this new stick is that the forward-canted pistol-grip can be twisted and locked diagonally to suit left – or right-handed players, or left centred. Personally I found the angle was such that it seemed more likely to suit left – or right-handed chimpanzees. Likewise I suspect the top fire-button is designed for looks rather than ergonomics, and would be quite satisfactory with a straightforward oval button. The base is a little odd, and not the kind of thing you like to be seen resting your hand on too freely. Left centrally, however, it has a nice, light feel and responsiveness, and is a good flight-sim stick. Could lead to embarrassing moments if caught wagging with it.

Features: moveable grip on handle; switchable fire buttons; selectable auto-fire; throttle control; X and Y axis trim control

Ergonomics: ① ② ③ ④

Value for money: ① ② ③ ④

For: Canted angle of stick

Against: Looks rather biological; causes a great deal of rude comments

Price: £29.99

Produced by: Suncom

Tel: 0285 642211

OVERALL

LOGIC 3 ANALOG

This is an analogue steering wheel. Unfortunately it's an analogue steering wheel without a base of any kind – it works by registering how far you tilt it, which means you have to hold it in mid-air, which means your arms get tired after one lap of Silverstone. Sitting holding it, you can't help feeling like a child with one of those stick-on jobbies, except this one doesn't have a yellow plastic horn in the middle. It's incredibly vague controls make you lean at ridiculous angles as you try to get your car to turn, and could well cause an epidemic of broken collarbones from people toppling off their executive chairs. That's if anyone buys it, which I doubt.

Features: a steering wheel with a lead

Ergonomics: ① ②

Value for money: ①

For: Could be fashioned into an attractive hat

Paint It.. Red.

I'M FED UP with boring white computers. Is there any way to customise mine and paint it red or something?

Tony Boorman, Birmingham.

The case is the easy part. It's only metal (or plastic). Take it off the computer and do the painting in another room - you cannot risk the solvents attacking the thin layers of sealant on the PCBs. If you are using a spirit based paint, test it first and follow the paint maker's instructions for priming surfaces.

Take good care of the computer while it's naked - don't use it and don't cover it with anything that will generate static (an insulating plastic) or drop fluff (the dog's blanket).

Don't paint the chassis itself. Your main problem will be the monitor. You should never disassemble a monitor - it has a live chassis and powerful capacitors that can kill you after it has been switched off. Yet if you try to paint the case while it's on the monitor you have the danger of paint dripping down the vents.

I personally would forget the whole idea. It would be almost impossible to do completely and well. What's wrong with cream anyway? It's restful. Incidentally, you can order a Cray computer in any colour you like. But where would you put one of those? MB.

Wind. Speed

I FIND WINDOWS runs very slowly on my 386 machine. Is it worth getting one of those accelerator cards?

Chris Enfield, Shaftesbury, Dorset

You don't mention how much memory you have - pretty weird considering I made up your letter to fill space. I would always look at memory first and then processing power and disk space before I bothered with anything else. You need at least 2Mb and at least a 386 to run Windows comfortably. Added to that should be a hard disk of at least 60Mb. I know the Windows 3.1 manual says that for standard mode you need 286 or above with 640k base & 256k extended memory and 6-9 Mb free on the hard disk. There may even be people out there trying to do it - but I bet they're prematurely aged.

You've configured the computer's memory to extended memory as the manual asks have you? Just asking.

I wouldn't bother with graphic accelerators unless you really do a lot of CAD stuff under Windows - and with your set up you'd be insane to do that. RAM cards don't earn their keep yet either. On board RAM is the best idea. You need a maths co-processor only if you do lots of calculations - surprising but true. You might look at a bigger drive (or a better drive such as a SCSI), because of the way Windows pages to disk, but a SCSI will only be worth the cost if you use large graphics or database files. Otherwise an ordinary hard disk of at least 60Mb, preferably 107Mb or above, will work wonders. MB.

Disk-repency

I'VE SEEN a device that allows you to use DD disks as HD. Is there really no difference between them?

Ray Maloney, London N1

If you speak to the manufacturers of the gadget, no; if you speak to the manufacturers of the disks, all the difference in the world. But they would say that, wouldn't they? I'm not convinced that the only difference between DD and HD is a little hole in the bottom right hand corner.

The story I believe is that the disk medium starts out the same but some batches of it test worse than others. These 'off HDs' become DDs and the corrupt parts can be ignored. This explanation probably offends both parties.

Scott Mueller has tested these pseudo 'HD' disks and found that they gradually lose data after six months. So if you use them, use them for temporary, non-critical work and rewrite the data every couple of weeks or so. Scott Mueller's book, Que's Guide to Data Recovery (ISBN 0-88022-541-6; £27.45), is a thorough, if techie, guide to everything you wanted to know about disks. MB.

Stic-key

MY KEYBOARD is fairly old and some of the keys need a hefty thump to get them to work, others stick. Do I need a new keyboard?

John Murray, Stroud, Glos.

I think it's just dirty. The things that can go wrong with keys are stuck springs and broken contacts. More frequently lots of fluff, rice from take-aways, cigarette ash and sticky coffee gets lodged in the keyboard because you - and everybody else - can't be bothered to use a dust cover.

You can try one of those vacuum cleaners that look as if they're designed for hamster cages or you could dismantle the keyboard and blow. Remember that it's made up of lots of switches and that if they are the spring type - rather than the magnetic or membrane type - then the springs will take off in all directions, like the clutch on an old English motorbike. If keys are getting stuck try levering them up gently otherwise its nimble surgery with thin-nosed pliers.

The keyboard has its own ROM that does a quick self check on power up. That's what those lights and beeps are all about. If your keyboard doesn't go through this song and dance when you switch on then the problem is more deeply rooted and probably incurable. Unless you just forgot to plug it in. MB.

Turn On

SOMEONE TOLD me that it was a mistake to switch a computer on and off all the time. Is this true?

Richard Shannon, Farnham, Surrey

Yes, because the changes in temperature within the computer will make the various bits of metal expand and contract. This can cause chips to edge out of their sockets. Many computers are left on all the time. Those in laboratories for instance, or those used as file servers. However, the home is a different matter. I turn on the computer in the morning and switch it off at night. Two reasons; 1) while on it is consuming power, and 2) it will get hot. I would feel a bit foolish if the damn thing burnt down my flat in my absence. So don't switch your computer on and off for each session, but I would turn it off before going to bed - tell it you've got a headache. MB.

Fail Safe

I GOT THE message 'FAIL ON INT 24' while trying to access a disk the other day. What does it mean? I can't find it in my DOS manual.

Paul Rastrick, Watford.

DOS is trying to tell you something. I'm sure that it had been giving you the famous

'General failure reading drive A message for some time and you simply kept bashing the keys in frustration. 'FAIL ON INT 24' is just another way of saying the same thing: it's the error code issued by DOS during some writing or reading operation. The most normal cause is an attempt to force DOS to read an unformatted disk.

Abort, Retry, Fail?'

Incidentally, your response to the 'Abort, Retry, Fail?' should take into account what you want to happen next. It's not a loop and it's no use trying everything to get out. Fail returns to the program with an error message, Abort jumps to the next instruction in the program and Retry... well, has another go. MB.

Expansive

HOW MANY expansion boards can I put in my computer at one time?

John Whattam, Aldershot

However many you can fit in. Oh, you mean safely. As many as will fit into your expansion slots without

What's In A Number

I've just caught up with the 486 chip and now there is a new one called the Pentium. Is this the same as the rest of the 86 family, or does the change of name herald a radical departure?

Richard Frost, Chesham

No, its the same 80586 that was scheduled for introduction in 1992. The reason for the snazzy name is that Intel got so fed up with other chip makers calling their processors by the Intel numbers that they tried to copyright the designation '586'. However, a court ruled that you couldn't patent a number and so the new chip was given the legally protected name of Pentium. MB.

(a) clashing with each other or (b) overloading the PSU (Power Supply Unit). You will find out about (a) because the board will stop working and may even tell you why. You should be able to alter the IRQ (Interrupt Channel) and sort out the problem. Most cards elbow each other for IRQ 2, 3, 5, 7 or 10. The systems timer uses 0, the keyboard 1, COM port 2 may use 3, COM port 1 uses 4 and the floppy disk controller uses 6.

Problem (b) will announce itself by blowing the fuse. Either take out one or two of the cards or fit a PSU with a higher rating.

When you put expansion boards in make sure that you tighten the holding screw at the top. If the cards are loose they could knock against each other and short out. MB.

The Modem World

I'M THINKING of buying a modem. It will be used mainly for leisure – i.e. BBS. What should I look for?

Graham Moorcroft, Nottingham

Modems are either external – connected to the serial port – or internal – in the form of an expansion card. The advantages of the external ones are that they are generally more powerful and can be shared by a number of computers. However, they may be more powerful than you need. The internal modems are cheaper and good enough for all but the most exacting tasks.

The first thing about your modem is how fast it can transfer data. This is measured in bits per second or bps. Divide this figure by ten for a rough idea of how many characters per second that means. Current rates are as follows:

Standard	receive	transmit
V21	300	300
V22	1,200	1,200
V22bis	2,400	2,400
V23	1,200	75
V32	9,600	9,600
V32bis	14,400	14,400

Most BBS will support all of these standards.

As well as the speed of transfer, modems differ on error correction and data compression. Error correction involves the receiving modem checking the data and sending a message to the transmitting modem asking it to re-transmit. Data compression, as the term suggests, means less time on line and so lower bills. Both these features can

Exchange Or Mart

I am thinking of upgrading from my old Amstrad 1286. What chance do I have of selling it, or using it in part exchange?

Audrey Verran, Plymstock

Yesterday's computer isn't quite as unsellable as yesterday's newspaper, but they run close. The price of computers is falling all the time – as a glance at the ads will tell you. I would forget about part exchange. Even if you got somewhere that would accept your computer, it would only give you a derisory amount. Your computer is, to be frank, past it. It is better to sell it to a friend or by using a small ad. Price it realistically and specify 'no tyre kickers'. Regard anything you get for it as a bonus. MB.

Power Up

What level of power should I look for when buying a PC? I have seen values ranging from 65 to 250 watts. I expect to have a hard disk, a floppy and a soundcard. I might fit a CD ROM at some later stage.

Sian Tatum, Cardiff

Hard disks take about 2-5 watts, depending on type rather than size. The processor is quite power hungry but with a hard disk controller, video adapter and soundcard, 65 watts should be adequate. If you go onto extra drives, maybe a tape streamer, then about 100 watts top. I would say that 100-150 is fine for a normal desktop. 200 will take care of your needs into the next millennium and 250 watts is OTT. There is no problem fitting a new PSU if your present one proves inadequate and no harm done by having unused power capacity. MB.

be implemented by software (slow) or hardware. All you need to know is that the standards for error correction are MNP Classes 1-5 and 10 and V42 and V42bis.

You will need software to drive the thing; there is an excellent shareware program called EaziLink, available from most libraries and, of course, Bulletin Boards (registration fee: £25). A new program called Odyssey (registration fee: £89) is supposed to be absolutely brilliant. If you are going onto Compuserve, you might like to check out TapCIS, an efficient manager of your time off-line. Registration fee is $79.

I'd better end by saying that the standard for modems is that set by Hayes so make sure that yours is Hayes-compatible, although I don't know of any that aren't. MB.

On The Cards

HAVING READ the feature in last month's issue, I'm going to buy a soundboard for my pc. What precautions against static should I take when installing it?

Steven Jones, Norwich

Keep the board in its static proof bag until the last moment. Read the manual, make sure you understand what goes where. Turn off the computer and turn off the plug at the main's socket although keep the plug in. Switch the computer on and off to make sure there's no current. Open up the PC and without touching any of the boards inside take a look at the expansion slot and see if it tallies with what the manual says.

Take off your shoes and rest part of your arm on the chassis of the computer to make sure you're earthed. (That's why you left the plug in). Get the card out of its bag and gently but firmly (as all the manuals say) insert it into the slot. If it doesn't go in easily, don't force it. Look to see if it's snagging on something. If you use too much force on circuit boards they can just snap.

This may all seem unnecessary and no doubt people get away with a more cavalier approach. Ask yourself: how much did this gizmo cost? How will I feel if I shag it up? MB.

Confused Memories

I AM FED UP with all this stuff about 'expanded' and 'extended' memory. What is the difference?

Colin Hall, Chelmsford

It's worse than you think. There is the High Memory Area (HMA) where you can squirrel away DOS, and the Upper Memory Blocks (UMB) for programs and drivers as well as extended and expanded memory.

As you know, historical accident and downward compatibility means that DOS can only address 640k. Well actually 1Mb (1,024k) but the top 384k of addresses are reserved. Extended Memory is managed by EMS, a bank switching program, or by programs that simulate bank switching.

EMS is fine if the program is written to use Expanded Memory such as spreadsheets and databases. The problem is that it still only allows page switching and therefore the memory is accessed in 64k chunks. DOS comes with its own memory manager, EMM386.SYS.

XMS – the Extended Memory Specification is newer and designed to run on 386 machines and above. Again, it needs programs written specifically for it (and because it is the more recent specification, not many are) or else a memory manager – such as the famous HIMEM.SYS which comes with DOS.

Although this all sounds complicated – it is complicated – the theory shouldn't stop you using the two types of memory in a painless way. The DOS manual gives useful tips on how to use these drivers and some programs – like Windows – make sense of the whole thing without you even being aware of it. MB.

Externally Driven

I AM RUNNING out of space on my 40Mb hard disk and am thinking of buying an additional drive. Is it better – or as good – to get an external drive? They must be less hassle to fit.

Carol Young, Hackney

Well, yes, but they either plug into the serial or parallel port. You can forget one that needs the serial port; it will be cripplingly slow. The parallel port will be little better. I would install an internal. The good news is that it's the easiest thing to fit inside a PC. Your present hard disk controller will be able to cope with the additional drive. The technical term for it is a slave drive so if you see references to altering jumpers to configure a slave, that's what it means.

In the highly unlikely event of your present controller not being able to support a slave drive, I would recommend getting another hard disk controller card to go with your new internal drive rather than go down the profitless road of external drives. The hard disk controller will simply fit into an expansion slot and will steer both drives. MB.

Honest Guv

I HAVE A GAME that needs bits of information to be typed in from the manual before it will run. Unfortunately, I've lost the manual. Can I use a program like debug to scroll through the game looking for text? What is the point of this sort of thing?

T. Kydd, Deptford

Lost the manual eh? Can I run software without one? Read him his rights, Krock. Actually, I feel like saying "go ahead" because debug is one of the few programs that make me feel nostalgic for edlin. You will soon learn the error of your ways using debug to scroll through a few thousand lines of code. I might add that you will never make much of a pirate if you can't think of a one line BASIC program that will report all alphanumeric characters in a mass of code.

The point of typing in bits of the manual or fiddling around with cut out discs is that it is necessary. Software houses don't do it for a lark. They do it because they know that if they don't even more of their product will be ripped off. None of this would be necessary if people could be trusted, but long experience has taught software houses that they can't be. MB.

A day in the life of: Incapability Brown

Like every truly creative person, I normally start the day by listening to Vivaldi's Four Seasons. I find it deeply inspirational: it uplifts me spiritually and girds me against the arduous day ahead – and it gets my bowels going, too. Then after I'm carried around to my office by one of the servants, I launch straight into the gruelling work of designing a garden. Generally I grab a couple of folly-style towers (everyone loves a good folly) and stick them in some sand at random. After that I have a bit of a nap, then stick a few shrubs about the gaff, along with the odd rock or shell. Anyway, by then the place looks so disgusting I usually just fill it with water, add a humorous cat's paw and a giant skull with an animated eel popping in and out of the eye socket, and charge my aquarium rates instead. I've got to stop hanging out at that opium den, it's really taking it out of me.

El-Fish is an aquarium simulator. We gave it to Patrick McCarthy and asked him to produce a meandering pile of nonsense that vaguely mentioned fish occasionally. Well, we might just as well have done, anyway.

THIS IS A BIT of a strange piece of software. It's not really a game at all, in the way that Sim Ant or something like that has game-ish elements. El-Fish is more a form of moving wallpaper. The idea is to design and edit your own fishtank, adding objects, backgrounds, plants and reefs as you see fit. Oh, and fish too.

You can select from the 'starter pack' of five fish and add them to the tank, or you can breed from those fish to try to produce new and interesting variations, using a kind of power-bar to decide how much variation in colour and shape you want. You can also allow a single fish to evolve in a similar way. If you're of an adventurous nature, you may like to cast your hook among the seas and rivers and try to 'fish' for more exotic varieties.

Once you have the fish you want, you can put them in your tank and watch them swim about, just like a real aquarium, but without the constant smell of fish having sex. If you're particularly bored, you can also drop pretend food into the pretend tank and watch the fish do their imitation of teenagers hanging about outside MacDonalds. Should you wish to add the correct air of menace, you can switch the pretend light off.

It's worth mentioning that a very high-spec PC is required – a 386sx/20 simply buries its face in its hands and sobs. And that's just when it's trying to display fish swimming in the tank. Ask it to animate a fish and it would probably take an overdose. "Animate?" you cry. "What's animate got to do with it?" In order to use a fish in the tank you need to animate it, and even with a 486/33 it takes about 20 minutes per fish, which is only slightly less time than it takes a real fish to be born, live its full and happy life, and die.

Now on to the things you can't do: you can't 'not feed' fish and leave them to starve; you can't introduce maniacal carnivorous fish into the tank, hand them some black pepper and a slice of lemon and let them run amok; you can't select and use a simulated machine gun on your be-finned creations, and you can't even continuously 'dunk' them above the surface of the water until they 'talk'. Who they think will buy it without those essential elements I don't know. Probably someone who likes fish but doesn't like the smell of sex. ☒

A love story

The minute I saw her I knew it was love – her beautiful eyes captured mine across the room and I was unable to look away. I watched her graceful movements. Her tiny form captivated me. I knew then that I had to have her, no matter what the cost – although once I was told, I must admit the temptation to haggle was a powerful one. No matter. A quick trip to the cashpoint machine and she was mine.

The trip home was a nightmare of sensual suspense. I asked her her name, but she only stared at me, as though in a trance of love. It's always difficult to talk at times like these. Instead, a knowing smile played about the corners of her mouth throughout the journey – although I concede, at the speed I was driving, it's possible that may have been due to G-Force. Eventually, however, I had her to myself in the privacy of my bedroom. I eased her from the small plastic bag in which she'd been forced to travel. It was time to complete our union. I kissed her full on her beautiful, parted lips. (Cut to trains going into tunnels, rockets taking off, tin-openers opening sardine cans, etc.) The one great love of my life was consummated.

But what was this? Quelle horreur, as I believe our French neighbours are so fond of shouting in times of distress. After our ecstatic coupling, imagine my shock – my absolute devastation – to find my beloved had been squashed and killed, and that she was now little more than an exotically-coloured mackerel paté. It's at moments like these that a weaker man would turn to religion. Fortunately, I was made of sterner stuff – and I also had a friend who ran a chip-shop...

But what about the children?

As soon as Clive saw Madge across the crowded fish-tank, he knew that he could no longer carry on with the hollow sham that his marriage to Beverley had become. So what if they were different species? So what if other fish laughed? Love would bind them and protect them from all that narrow-mindedness. Clive left Beverley that very afternoon, and soon he and Madge had a nice little two-up, two-down figure of Neptune to live in. Alright, so it was at the wrong end of the tank, down by the animated skull, and none of their old friends had anything to do with them, but they were in love. It wasn't long before little ones began to arrive. But what was this? Clarissa was purple and black halves, with horrid yellow stripes across her face, Eric was like a big fat red balloon... and poor little Brian had his eyes at the wrong end of his body. They were nothing more than mutants! Obviously the moron operating the Breed buttons had whacked the Colour and Shape Variation bars up to the max - didn't he realise it was people's lives he was playing with? Mercifully, the children were all sterile, but all the same, what would the new neighbours say? Clive and Madge had no option but to eat their young.

TROUBLESHOOTER

FEATURING THE HACKMASTERS™ AND THE TRUEPLAYERS™

The gamesplaying world is at war. Two sides in a never ending battle for domination. On one side, the HackMasters™ – techno cyber-punks committed to laying waste to swathes of code, dedicated to furthering the cause of cheats, hacks, pokes and spots. On the other, the TruePlayers™ – old fashioned games masters, who sit for hours (come rain or irate wife) with a cup of coffee and a digestive biscuit, drawing maps on little pieces of notepaper and truly playing the game.

TroubleShooter is the mediator in this conflict. It presents both sides of the argument, makes no judgement, and fields the abuse from either side. We are the Boutros Boutros Ghali of the games tips world (but not quite as useless).

"He was a small man. A small build capped by small shoulders and a small head which lolled on an obscenely long neck like a cherry tree in the wind. He sized me up with huge jaundiced eyes, his cut-mouth chewing on a small sausage roll. Standing in the wake of the real men who washed down the street, he looked as out of place as a Wimbledon winner in a coffee commercial. He was no Wimbledon winner though. He was Thorgandia Son Of Thorgandian. A TruePlayer™. An RPG man. A 'fantasy adventurer'. Call it what you like. He wasn't smoking a camel. He didn't drink rye. And he didn't slap women about. He was no friend of mine."

Raymond Chandler,
Farewell My Cardigan (1939)

The HackMasters™

HackMasters™ and PC Zone take no responsibility for direct or indirect damage caused to software or hardware by the use of the HackMaster™ hacks. It's very difficult to cause any damage to your PC or hard disk (bar dropping it from the top of Canary Wharf). If you follow the guidelines closely, nothing horrible will happen.

THIS MONTH we continue the theme of verbally assaulting people who play (ssshhh) 'RPGs with another spiral of irreverent and, some might say (if they were drunk), amusing hacks, pokes and ways to break your hard disks.

Backup

Most, if not all, of the hacks on this page will require changing actual game files. It is then sensible, if not prudent, to back up the file specified in the hack. To do this, simply enter the directory containing the file, say for example SAVEGAME.SAV, and back it up thus:

COPY SAVEGAME.SAV SAVEGAME.BAK

If you make a bad mistake and/or Beelzebub appears in your kitchen, then restore the files thus:

COPY SAVEGAME.BAK SAVEGAME.SAV

Simple as pimples. But remember the bottom line – don't ring us, unless it's an emergency or you're really stuck.

Hexadecimal

Let me tell you about the PC. It doesn't count like you and I. We count up in base 10. The PC's count up in base 16. Like this: 01, 02, 03, all the way up to 09 and then 0A (for 10), 0B (for 11), up to 0E (14) and 0F (15) and then 10, which, in decimal, is the number 16. If this sounds complicated then it's because it is. But for the HackMaster's™ experience you only really need to learn a few choice hex numbers (and remember all hex numbers on this page will be suffixed with an 'H' so there's no confusion, e.g. 6AH or FFFFH).

HEX	DECIMAL	HEX	DECIMAL
0AH	10	40H	64
0FH	15	63H	99
10H	16	64H	100
20H	32	C8H	200
28H	40	FAH	250
32H	50	FFH	255

Debug

Somewhere in the depth of uncharted territory (i.e. your DOS folder) is a very useful program called DEBUG. It allows you to edit files of all descriptions and subtly change the data. It is the program we will use most in the HackMaster™ zone, and since it is the most user-unfriendly program on this planet, a brief introduction / explanation may be in order. Here's a step by step guide to a DEBUG hack:

To run it just type DEBUG in the appropriate directory (i.e. the one mentioned in the hack blurb). It should run automatically and produce a little '>' prompt. If you get a 'file not found' style error then your DOS path hasn't been set properly. Refer to the MS-DOS manual and remember the bottom line – don't ring us.

1 > NVUX.SHP <return>

Now, once you have a little '>' prompt you should type in the commands listed in the program, starting with the line above, the 'N' command. This tells DEBUG which program is to be hacked. There should be no space between the 'N' and the full filename.

2 > L <return>

This command actually loads the file you've just specified into memory and into the hands of the hacker.

3 > E 10DA v <return>

This is the Edit function. Type it as it appears above, i.e. with a space between the E and the address (10DA) and the 'v'. The 'v' stands for a value you will enter yourself, ranging between 00H and FFH (0 to 255 decimal).

4 > E 09CC 4E 69 6E

If the edit command looks something like this, then press RETURN after the address and DEBUG will repeat your command. Then simply type in the values which follow (4E, 69 etc.) pressing SPACE between each one, except the last when you should press RETURN. So basically, the command should be enacted thus (with what you must type in red):

> E 09CC <RETURN>

21FB:09CC 64.4E <space> 7E.69 <space>
8F.6E <return>

5 > W <return>

This command writes the hacked file back onto the disk. A message saying "writing xxxxx bytes" will appear, where xxxxx is the size of the file (it varies). Nothing has been changed on your hard disk until you type this command. So if you've made a mistake earlier just quit DEBUG and start the process again.

6 > Q <return>

This quits you back to DOS. ☹

The Bottom Line

The bottom line is that you'll have to have a specky chromosome in your genes (or else borrow one) to achieve maximum satisfaction from the HackMaster's™ experience. If you are not very brave or you are having teething troubles then the bottom line is 'Do not ring us' unless it is an emergency.

Infinite bullets on Alone In The Dark. Infinite gun fights with mottled white zombies more like.

ULTIMA UNDERWORLD (Origin/Electronic Arts)

First under the hammer this month is the unbelievably excellent Ultima Underworld, a game that is so deep as to be unspoilable by cheating. And what you must know about the HackMasters™ is that they only play a game for that which maybe termed 'hacking research'. I think the 372 hours 'hacking research' carried out on this addictive product are totally justified by the end result.

Save your game at any stage in slot one. Quit the game and then enter the SAVE1 directory and backup the file PLAYER.DAT. Using DEBUG enter the following commands:

>NPLAYER.DAT
>L
>E 011F CF 255 Strength
>E 0120 CC 255 Dexterity
>E 0121 C9 255 Intelligence
>E 0122 C6 255 Attack
>E 0123 C3 255 Defense
>E 0125 BD 255 Sword Skill
>E 0129 B1 255 Mana Skill
>E 012A AE 255 Lore
>E 012B AB 255 Casting
>E 0132 96 255 Picklock skill
>E 013E 9D Level 16
>E 0139 84 255 max units of Mana
>E 0137 87 255 max units of energy
>E 01DD FF 255 units of energy
>E 0160 60 To be unpoisoned
>W

Slip back into the main directory and play the game as usual, but now with consistently and, some might say (if they were the RPG police), illegally enhanced chances of surviving the Stygian Abyss. Note: this will also work on the CD-ROM version

ALONE IN THE DARK (Infogrames)

Somebody in the office moaned, "That's not an RPG - it's got guns and stuff". Divvy. Of course it's an RPG. It's based loosely on The Call Of Cthulu - which is about as Tunnels & Trolls-esque as you can possibly get. Anyway, load this rather lovely vector-gouraud RPG and save any game you feel like enhancing in slot numero 1. Quit out and backup the file SAVE0.ITD. Load in DEBUG and follow this list of commands, and then play as normal.

>NPLAYER.ITD
>L
>E 4E9A FF 255 bullets for your rifle
>E 4EAA FF 255 health points

STAR CONTROL II (Accolade)

As a continuation of the TroubleShooter's theme (i.e. 'being up Star Control II's bum' and continually singing the game's praises.) and as a riposte to the TruePlayer's™ tortuously right-on solution last month, here is the HackMaster™ answer, simply entitled, NinjaVux. Whether you play the Melée game for your own amusement or for betting purposes with your friends, there is no doubt that the range of ships on offer can lose their appeal. So here's an enhanced vux to pit your skills or your chums against.

Change into the STARCON2 directory and backup the file VUX.SHP as VUX.BAK. Run DEBUG and use the following commands (all x values can be from 00H to FFH):

>NVUX.SHP
>L
>E 10DA x MAX CREW (try 32H)
>E 10DB x STARTING CREW
>E 10DC x MAX BATTERY (try 32H)
>E 10DD x STARTING BATTERY
>E 10ED x SHIP SPEED (try 50H)
>E 10EF x ACCELERATION (try 30H)
>E 10F2 x BATTERY PER SHOT (00H for infinite battery)
>E 10F4 x BATTERY RECHARGE RATE (00H for fastest)
>E 10F5 x TURNING SPEED (00H for max manoeuvrability)
>E 10F6 x TURNING CIRCLE (00H for tightest)
>E 10F7 x FIRE RATE (FFH for highest)
>E 09CC 4E 69 6E 6A 61 20 20 (New name for VUX)

Experimentation is the key here. But do not experiment with these values on any other ships, as they will not work. If the NinjaVux proves a cult hit, we may well print some more enhanced ships in future issues.

CLOUDS OF XEEN (Origin)

We think that the latest of the Might And Magic saga is a mite too badly paced. So why not add a bit of allegro to your 'adventuring' with HackMaster's™ enhanced character hack (whee). Save the team you wish to be 'changed' into slot 1, quit out, backup the file XEEN01.SAV and then DEBUG, using the following commands:

>NXEEN01.SAV
>L
>E 0BDF v Hit points character 1
>E 0BE1 v Spell points character 1
>E 24C3 v HPs char 2
>E 24C5 v SPs char 2
>E 1F3B v HPs char 3
>E 1F3D v SPs char 3
>E 1B15 v HPs char 4
>E 1B17 v SPs char 4
>E 0D41 v HPs char 5
>E 0D43 v SPs char 5
>E 142B v HPs char 6
>E 142D v SPs char 6
>W

ULTIMA VII (Origin)

This has been around a while so the HackMasters™ feel they won't be spoiling anybody's dinner by printing the built-in cheat we have discovered. This cheat changes no data permanently so no backing-up is necessary. To activate the cheat run Ultima 7 like this:

ULTIMA7 ABCDV

Where 'v' is the control code for ASCII character 255. To enter the code hold down ALT and type 255 on the numeric key pad. Release ALT and then press RETURN. The game will run as normal but now the following keys have some esoteric effects:

F2 Cheat system

Shows the cheat mode menu

F3 Go to Map location

Point and click on the map to reach that location.

F5 Cast Spell

Enter the spell number and press RETURN

F8 Read

Type number of sign, book or whatever and press RETURN

ALT-1 Sound effect test

Type a number and press RETURN

ALT-2 Sprite test

Type a number and press RETURN

Experimentation is obviously the key here. But remember nothing you do can damage your game.

SILLY SILLY SILLY

AV8B (Domark)

When you're a master of someone else's code (as the HackMasters™ are) then the potential for silly silliness is manifold. Witness then this very silly hackette for Domark's class simulator AV8B. It will give you the ability to fly any object in the game, from frigates and trucks to F-16s and even your own AV8B pilot's chair.

Simply change in the AV8B directory and then into the DG directory. Backup the file AV8B as AV8B.BAK and then copy any of the files in the directory over the AV8B file like this:

COPY xxxxxx AV8B

Where xxxxxx is a filename. Try, for a special kind of amusement value, files like TRUCK, AUSTIN, RADAR, TOWER and SHED - but any file will do. So, to recap, if you want to be in control of say an air hanger use:

COPY AIRHANG AV8B

Not forgetting the space in-between the words.

Once you've chosen an amusing shape, run the sim as usual but skirt the mission game and head straight for the acclimatisation chamber. Choose 'Short Range Weapons' and then an exterior view to experience the full 'amusement factor' of this hack.

The TruePlayers™

ULTIMA
UNDERWORLD II

The greatest game that ever lived! The greatest solution there will ever be!

Part One

THE CASTLE

EXPLORE the castle thoroughly and open all the secret doors. Use the secret door in the starting room to reach the outer circle. Talk to everyone and glean as much information as possible. Don't try to kill anyone. They're all immortal and you'll just end up in prison, with Lord British giving you a self-righteous lecture. The door which leads to nowhere in Nystul's study actually leads to a secret underground study. The armoury key is to be found on Sewer Level 2 guarded by a large, tough reaper. Try to store all the food you find in one room.

Characters

LADY TORY'LL teach you Charisma, and fancies you a little. Unfortunately, she'll reach a rather sticky end later on so you may as well put your +3 love sword away.

FERIDWYN has nothing to teach you but humility. Acts as a buffer to your ego, the cynical git.

PATTERSON is slimy and creepy but will teach you Charisma. He's the traitor.

MIRANDA is very useful. Make sure you speak to her first on returning to the castle or the rest of the characters will be ignorant of your heroics.

NYSTUL will teach you Casting and increase your Mana Store. He provides vital information at all stages of the adventure. And he also warms the blackrock gems into activity. So don't kill him.

NELL tells you a very important piece of info which you must write down or remember.

NANNA is very stropic. A woman, you see. Go out of your way to be polite to her or she'll start a servants strike, and you'll be knee-high in smell.

SYRIA will train you in Sword and Unarmed combat, even though she's a woman.

GEOFFORY is more your Defence and Attack man.

CHARLES has very little to say but he does find a key to the very big door in the sewers.

DUPRE gives you lessons in Axe and Mace and yaks on endlessly about the good old days.

NELSON you should make the most of. He cops it mid-way through the game so learn as much Lore and Search from him as you require.

JULIA is an all round thief. Traps, Locks and Mending can't be learnt from her. Also, ignore any suspicions she has.

ILOLO can Swim, Missile and Appraise but has'n't thought of shaving.

THE SEWERS LEVEL TWO

EVERYTHING GETS a little tougher here. Poisonous rotworms and slugs make an appearance, as well as the occasional mongbat and giant white rat. A tough water current runs south to the south-east corner so be careful not to drown.

The northern pool is accessed by falling through the pit traps on level one. Don't forget to pass through the drainage ditch. The dread spiders to the north-east will not attack you unless you grab any of their eggs. You'll need one later so nick one and run like the clappers. The headlesses in the north-west will attack you instantly. They are tough so avoid them until you're ready.

Behind the lava to the south-east is a magic 'watcher' placed there by the guardian to eavesdrop on the castle. A special item given to you later on will give you access to here. A very hard reaper guards the armoury key to the south. It is hidden in a small pit at the end of the chamber. The best strategy is to cast Speed and rush in there, grab the key, and bullet out before you die. The goblins to the south-west know very little of interest.

THE SEWERS LEVEL ONE

TREAD CAREFULLY throughout this level – the floors are infested with rotworms and acid slugs. Some complex pit traps need trial and error in the north-east section of the maze. The thief Fissif knows where the armoury key is but be hard on him and he'll turn himself in to the authorities. The two headlesses to the north and the two gazers in the east are very tough and should be left until you're tough enough. Try not to directly antagonise any bats as they will annoy you constantly. Any 'damaged' doors can be chopped down with your weapon. Try butting into drainage ditches as they often hide secret rooms. Collect any leeches you find – they cure poison.

To get over the waterfall cast Water Walk and then the big Jump spell. The elusive chamber to the south contains some very useful items but don't try to smash or pick the lock on the door (it won't work). Wait until Charles gives you the key later on. The Haunt within holds the key to the chest. Make sure you entice it into the corridor or you may lose the key in the water.

1. Up to Castle.
2. The thief Fissif. Watch. Resist Blows potion. Lor stone. Food and drink.

16. Watcher.
17. Down to Sewer Level 3.

THE SEWERS LEVEL THREE

THIS IS THE final level of the sewers and the darkest. Have some light handy. The centre contains the blackrock gem replica and is surrounded by lurkers and bats, who will attack you if you get near enough. There is an intricate set of secret water tunnels in the south-west so explore thoroughly. Two ghosts are to be found in the same area, guarding their meagre possessions. The stairway in the south-east leads straight up to the castle basement.

To teleport yourself to another dimension, simply align yourself with the discoloured facet of the gem and walk forward. You may be bounced off if your orientation is awry. Just try again if this happens. ☞

1. Blackrock gem replica.
2. Two ghosts guarding light mace, sapphire, Flameproof potion, and a goblet.
3. Small shield and some candles.
4. Heal potion.
5. Chain cowl, Por stone, scroll of Sunlight.
6. Up to Castle Basement.
7. Up to Sewer level 2.

THE PRISON TOWER

THE METHOD for this, the first of the alternate dimensions, is very precise so listen very carefully. Smash the first door to get through and into the storeroom. There isn't much of interest here, bar the delivery note (behind a box) which you must read and keep. Be careful emptying the barrels as they may have nasty surprises within.

Go up to the next floor and a goblin guard will accost you. Keep your cool and don't provoke a fight (there are at least twenty goblins in this complex). Feign innocence of everything including the password and then say you've got a delivery note. The goblin will then let you pass. The standard procedure for the security doors is when the first door is closed the second door opens.

The next floor is the goblin rec-room and is packed with racist and politically incorrect goblins, who make wisecracks about your species. Don't rise to it. Freemis is here and is out to provoke a fight. Ignore him and admit "there is no point talking to him". You can empty the chest but don't take any objects. The gobbies will attack you if you do.

Go up to the kitchen. Talk to Janar and flatter him - you'll need him later. In the kitchen are Marcus (who has had his tongue cut out and is not very communicative) and Felix (who was once a Lord but has been enslaved by Freemis). Admit to Felix that you are the Avatar, and he will tell you about Bishop, the resistance leader imprisoned on the top floor. Felix also wants Freemis killed and will give you a Cornucopia (a ever-replenishing food basket) if you do so. Don't. There'll be plenty of time for that later.

The fifth floor is the armoury. A guard warns you not to touch anything. Heed his advice. Just talk to the smithy. Pamper his exasperation and tell him you know how you'd make frazzium gauntlets. He will love you for this advice, so say your farewells. Straightaway, speak to him again and ask to borrow a pair of gauntlets. He'll give them to you and you should put them on.

Whip up the stairs and enter the Captain's office. Play along with his mis-identification of you as Lorca and sound as arrogant as you can ("crack him like a nut"). The stupid dope'll give you the password to the next level and another pair of frazzium gloves which you should keep. The password changes per game but is always a word difficult to spell such as "melanoma" or "silhouette". Leave the doors on this level and just give the password to the guard and go up...

To the pre-prison floor. You'll be asked the password again so write it down. Open the door to the next level with the lever to the east. Don't touch any objects. Don't antagonise anyone. Go up to the prison and walk through the force field to confront Bishop. Admit who you are and give him a pair of frazzium gauntlets. Suck him dry of info and then let him escape. Hurry - almost there.

RUNES THIS LEVEL

R, S, Y

After the troll has killed everyone.

1. 2 pairs of leather boots, food delivery voucher, 2 daggers, 6 candles, 3 oil flasks, 1 flute, 10 arrows, 2 rotworms.
2. 17 coins, black pearl.
3. 26 coins, excellent light mace & frazzium gauntlets (in Freemis' chest)
4. 10 coins, excellent shortsword, axe, Marcus and Felix (cornucopia)
5. 19 gold, wand of Light with 9 charges (hidden in debris). The smithy is carrying Ylem, Rel, and Sanct stones. The Armoury is opened with the Fishy Key (level 6). The resinous key opens the chests which contain: 21 sling stones, 3 shortswords, breastplate, chain cowl, 3 shields.
6. 7 gold. Lots of booze and food. A scroll of Missile Protection (in Borne's chest). A long sword and 4 keys (2 of which are for the armoury).
7. 21 gold, 8 shortswords and 5 bucklers.
8. The 'monster' room contains 4 mongbats enter at your own peril. You'll also find Bishop and the Goblin Traitor up here.

Now go back down to the Captain and demand the black gem off him. The sap will give it to you. While you're there demand the keys for the prison cells. He'll tell you the password for Janar. Go and see Janar, tell him the password (usually 'Beacon') and get the keys.

Now go back up to the prison and free the Goblin Traitor whom you saw through the cell window (with the 'unnaturally heavy key'). Chat to him and feel rather righteous. Go back down to the Captain's level and enter the room marked 'armed escort only' (with the same key). Inside is a troll called Garg. Make friends with him and he will kill all the goblins in the tower! Make sure you talk to him twice and urge him to go down to the basement. Now the tower is yours and you can plunder it at your will. Watch out for the chests in the Armoury as they are booby-trapped. The double doors on the second level cannot be opened.

Once you've taken what you want, teleport back to Britannia (just walk into the blackrock on the first level). Using the special staircase zoom back to the castle and get Nystul to warm the blackrock gem for you. Also, talk to everyone and check on Nanna. If she goes on strike the game cannot be completed (this is a bug) so choose your words carefully. When you feel up to it, zip back down to the Sewers Level 3 and use the warmed gem on the big gem (make sure you're close enough). The room will shake and another facet of the gem will miraculously light up. Enter this facet to be teleported to the next world.

1. Mandolin. Three eyeballs in chest.
2. Torch. 12 arrows. Bow. Food. Mail leggings. Corroded Key. Wand of Magic Arrow with 14 charges. Potion of Missile Protection. Potion of Hallucination.
3. Longsword. Blackrock gem.
4. 12 Crossbow bolts. Cursed red ring. Plate boots. 12 Sling stones.
5. 3 shortswords. 3 bucklers. 3 axes. Loads of leather armour and an anvil.
6. 2 poison potions., 2 cure poison, 1 lesser heal. Lantern. Excellent jewelled dagger of Unsurpassed Accuracy (Altara gives you this)
7. Chest containing Heal potion and Wand of Acid Spit with 8 charges.
8. 2 oil flasks, candle, torch.
9. Flute, sapphire.

(Above) Try to avoid the ethereal void as much as possible since its two distinguishing features are (a) Wall to wall lava and (b) Floor to floor demons bunches of dream spice (which again you'll find later). Lobar will be very friendly and chat for hours, but make sure you ask him about the 'virtues'.

Now go and see Mystell. She will give you a test of loyalty which, with the info you've collected, should be easy to answer. She'll ask you to spy on the sorceress Altara. Agree to do so and head straight for Altara. Be polite and honest and she'll reveal certain facts to you, giving you a special weapon which will kill the 'listener' back in Britannia. Now go and chat to Blackie in the stables and she'll send you on a quest to find information about her race (you'll find this out much much later).

After that enter the dungeons (via the back of the pub) and have a root around. The portcullis is unopenable so don't bother. Any other doors can be smashed open. Find the key in the barrel and then find the secret door to the north. This will lead you to the oubliette which is protected by a moongate trap. To deactivate the trap simply remove all the candles. Fall into the room below (watch out for the two tough headlesses) and the next blackrock gem will be yours.

There's another secret door at the back of the barracks, which leads to an underground chamber protected by a rather tough guard. Don't fight him - he turns into a tougher demon if you kill him. Better still apologise and say you're leaving and then simply use the key from the dungeon on the door. The two brain monsters within hold up the flying keep. If you kill them (which you shouldn't unless you've saved) the keep comes tumbling down. You can escape by teleporting and then return to explore the ruins (this is not a recommended course of action).

Zip back to Britannia and go to the lava section on Sewer Level 2. There you will have quite an easy battle with the Listener. Pop briefly back to the keep, tell Miranda everything, get Nystul to warm the gem for you, and then you're ready for Ice World... next issue. Z

KILHORN KEEP

THIS IS ANOTHER bum-lick level. Don't antagonise anyone unnecessarily. This place is packed with useful 'chums'. Firstly in the main hall, you'll meet some merchants. Merzan sells expensive magic potions such as Greater Heal, Restore Mana, and Invisibility. He will also identify items for you and recharge wands (very useful). Bishay has some armour but Aron has nothing so ignore him. Talk to the big cats, the Trilkhun, and they will tell you to see Blackie, in the stables.

Your first port of call should be the throne room, to speak to Lord Thibris, who will wax on about his old war campaigns but will divulge important background material. Ask him about everything and then go to the pub, next to the throne room, to chat to Ogri, Kintara, and Lonar. Ogri knows about secret passages but will only cough up if you can find the banner of Kilhorn (you'll find this much later on). Kintara moons on about her travels but has a pair of dragon skin boots to sell (these protect from lava). She'll only exchange them for

Dune II

Sick and tired of the so-called 'HackMasters™' constant ram-raiding of perfectly good games, Andy Butcher decided to write a guide to Dune II that doesn't resort to underhand techie fixes...

T

HERE ARE a couple of things that apply to all situations in Dune II:

- Although House Harkonnen is initially the strongest, the Atreides get stronger towards the end. Ordos are in the middle.

- Never sit and do nothing – if all else fails, use a wimpy unit to scout out more spice fields, or just generally explore.
- Try to be aware of what's happening everywhere – use the radar map to move around the current sector quickly.
- Play the game with a Sound Blaster card – the digitised speech is very useful, and makes it easier to keep track of what's going on.

- As soon as they're available, always have an MCV in reserve, and use it to re-build your Construction Yard if it's suddenly destroyed.

Enemy tactics

The computer opponent tends to follow the same pattern in each sector. After a short pause there will be a first strike, normally dropped by Carryall on all sides. Almost as soon as this force is beaten, the main assault begins with a strong attack from the direction of the enemy base. These attacks will continue in waves for some time, and then pause as the computer rebuilds its forces.

Starting off

Getting off to a good start is vital – you are always attempting to seize control of an enemy-held sector, complete with at least one base and initially superior numbers, and it's often possible to lose within the first few minutes.

The first priority is to start spice production. Build a Wind Trap, and then a Spice Refinery, then an Outpost. Place all these on Concrete Slab foundations. While doing this position your starting forces around your base, and use a light vehicle (Trikes are ideal) to scout for spice. Do this behind and to either side of your base – the enemy nearly always starts on the opposite side of the map, and any early contact speeds up their first attack.

Beat off the first attack, and then begin your defensive line.

Your base

It is vital to think ahead when building, as mistakes can become disasters later.

- Always use Slabs for any buildings facing in the direction of the enemy, Spice Refineries and Wind Traps at least
- Never build Refineries on the left of your base, as the harvesters can become stuck in the middle of your buildings.

Ordos unit destroyed

- Build Factories and Repair Facilities on the side facing the enemy, and Wind Traps on the other.
- Surround buildings that need no access with other buildings.
- Avoid 'roads' in-between buildings – vehicles can become stuck in them.
- Construct new building types as soon as they're available.
- Keep an eye on building damage levels.

Defence

If you can set up a strong defensive position, you've effectively won the game. After the first attack, the enemy will always come from the direction of their base, and hardly ever try to flank you or attack you from the rear.

- Set up a defensive line of vehicles. After the first few attacks you will know the 'width' of the enemy attack front, and can block them.
- Scout ahead in the direction of the enemy base, to allow ample warning of attacks, and maximise long-range weapons.
- Make the line a few squares away from your base, and two vehicles deep. Place heavily-armoured units in front, and long-range units behind. Place both on 'guard'.
- Build defensively (see 'your base'), allowing new and repaired vehicles to be released just behind the defensive line.
- Try to keep a two-square buffer between your buildings and the sand on this side of your base, and build turrets every other square at the edge, allowing enough room for vehicles to enter and leave.

- Replace and repair vehicles often.

Attack

Once the defensive line is set up you should be nearly immune to conventional attacks. Keep destroying enemy vehicles until the 'lull', then start your attack.

- Use light vehicles to scout out the enemy base – don't worry if they're destroyed in the process.
- Build a group of six or so of the toughest vehicles available, and send them to the side of the enemy base, out of attack range.
- When they're all there, attack en masse. Attack any turrets first, then enemy vehicles, then the buildings. Always attack a target with all of your force at once.
- When this group is destroyed, repeat the procedure, keeping an eye on your defences.
- Use infantry in attacks after the enemy turrets and vehicles have been destroyed – move them into buildings and they self-destruct, causing a great deal of damage. Again, attack in groups.
- Don't worry about capturing buildings – it's easier to destroy them. ☐

The Peace Table

IN THE inter-galactic inter-continental warfare waged by both sides in the Mother of All Gamesplaying Wars there are inevitable lulls. Lulls during which the HackMasters™ and the TruePlayers™ choose to forget their differences and come together around the Peace Table for the common good of all Gamesplaying kind. To illustrate the point here's a summary of the minutes of their latest meeting...

GATEWAY (Legend)

Joel Morris, Hackney: I know this game is old, but I'm 100% stuck. I've visited all the worlds and done everything I can, but I can't seem to do anything in the museum. How do you steal the disk without being arrested?

Peace Table: You firstly need the medallion from Nubar (you'll have to get 7 out of 10 in the trivia quiz). Go to the museum and put the medallion on the device. The device will hum. Take the tuning fork from the pedestal and then put the tuning fork inside the device. A hologram of the fork will appear over the medallion. Take the medallion and put in on the pedestal. This will con the alarm system into believing you're an upstanding member of the Gateway community.

Joel: Thanks very much Peace Table.

Peace Table: Our pleasure, Joel.

SPACE QUEST 5 (Sierra)

Kay Small, Kingsbury: I've been playing Roger Wilco for three weeks –

Peace Table: Three weeks!

Kay: Yes three weeks and I still can't get the cloaking device from the Womanoid's ship. Help!

Peace Table: Enter the Womanoid's ship and examine the panel containing the cloaking device. First turn all the dials to diagonal. Then click on the Upper Left and Lower Right panels. Now turn the remaining dials straight, click on the last two panels and then take the device.

Kay: Thanks Peace Table! Gosh, you must be good in bed or something.

Peace Table: Oh yes.

THE SUMMONING (US Gold)

Mr. R. Stadler, Cambs: At the three Challenges I can't solve the Challenge Of The Mind. The mouth asks you to solve the equation – how?

Peace Table: The objects you are given to solve the equation are a bottle, a rock, and a broken bottle. You don't need international peace-keeping abilities to know the solution is thus: bottle + rock = broken bottle.

Mr. R. Stadler: Oh yeah. I guess I must be pretty stupid then.

ANOTHER WORLD (Delphine)

Steven McGann, Aldershot: I just can't get past the bloody second section Peace Table!

Peace Table: It's okay. It's alright Steve.

Steve: But I just can't do it, Peace. I get out of the cage and I always, yes always, get killed by the guy at the last elevator.

Peace Table: This is a tough problem that we often face here in our plush suite at the International Peace Keepers Hotel in New York. Here's what you must do: get out of the cage, pick up the gun, run right, shoot the first guy, and keep running right until you reach the wall. Turn around and build a force-field, step forward a little so the gun peeps past your field and shoot the aliens which come a-running at you. You'll have to build two force-fields in all and in the meantime your friend is knocking down the walls. When the wall goes down run right and then go all the way to the bottom in the elevator and shoot the small button on the left. This will turn the power off. Go back to the elevator, go down the middle corridor. Quickly, run left, down, left and then up.

I hope this helps.

Steve: It does! It does! Thank you! Thank you!

Peace Table: Alright. Don't get carried away.

GOBLIINS (Digital Integration)

Margaret Salmon, Brighton: I can't beat level four of Gobliins (the one with the zombie and the hunchback). It bugs me frankly. And tell me quickly, because I've haven't the patience for your Peace Table perambulations.

Peace Table: Steady on Marg. Here's how to do it. Near the hunchback is a stick. Punch it or zap it to make it taller. The puncher must then climb the stick and punch the face. This will release a tongue. Release the zombie and get both goblins standing on the tongue. As the zombie comes near get the puncher to smack the big face. This will raise the tongue and let the zombie walk underneath.

Margaret: Good. Bye!

Peace Table: Er, bye (thinks: lordy she was a bit stropky) ☐

So that's it for another month of Troubleshooting. If you feel you've any hacks (newies or additions to the ones printed) then send them in. If you feel you've any complete solutions to donate to the Gamesplaying cause then send them in. If you feel you need the aid of Peace Table, send in your request. The address is Troubleshooter, PC Zone, 19 Bolsover Street, London, W1P. Next month we'll finish Underworld II, and be hacking into Magic Pockets, and Shadowlands. Stay tuned.

Mark Burgess has just returned from Macca's course 'How to Write Seminal Reviews'. This is his homework:

CATACOMB ABYSS

CATACOMB ARMAGEDDON

CATACOMB APOCALYPSE

Catacomb Abyss has already sold in its thousands. It was programmed by Mike Maynard, Jim Row and Nolan Martin for Gamers' Edge in conjunction with the famous ID team which produced Wolfenstein 3D. Catacomb Abyss is shareware and the next two episodes – Catacomb Armageddon and Catacomb Apocalypse – cost £34.08 inclusive (contact Transend).

CATACOMB ABYSS

YOU ARE A magician who has just defeated his dark rival, Nemesis, in the mother of all battles. Unfortunately his blind minions do not know when to acknowledge defeat. They have put up an idol to their deposed leader and a pall of gloom and eldritch horror now lies over the land.

The panic-stricken townspeople have once again asked you to help. Only your magic arts can save them and their mouldering town.

You are armed with your wits – oh dear – and magic missiles. You can collect zappers – a kind of machine gun version of the missiles – and Xterminators, which spray out missiles in all directions. Useful if you get cornered, and you will. You can also find cure potions, which restore your strength after a punishing bout. These bits of kit will either be suspended in the air or else in treasure chests. They can all be destroyed by your missiles, so take care.

The screen shows an inventory of keys and equipment, together with a display of your health and a crystal ball. The latter is a combination of radar screen and compass; it shows the position and distance of baddies and the way North.

The keys you collect are vital to your progress. As you come up against a door, you will be told what colour key it needs. There are also scrolls that give various bits of information.

The other way around is to blast weak walls. These are blood stained (Garden of Souls, Crystal Maze), marked with banners (Mausoleum) or stand out in some other way. The message bar will often give you useful hints.

The Towne Cemetery

You start in the Towne Cemetery which holds green, red and blue keys. The enemies here are zombies and bats, both of which can be dispatched with one shot. Look for the red windows and throw a missile at them. Stand back when you do this as some nasty is bound to appear and you need to draw a bead on him.

The green key is off Shinbone Alley. Scroll one is in the Family Plot where you will be attacked by bats. Follow them to get the blue key. The purple jewel is in a storage room off the Private Plots.

The Garden of Tears

Use the blue key to get into the Garden of Tears. The red key is in the storage room off South Midway – but you will need the yellow key. There is one in a back wall niche off the Field of Sighs – a noxious place off Central Midway where you will be attacked in force. As well as zombies and bats you will now have to contend with flying demons – fortunately another one shot creature. The red key gets you into the Mausoleum Grounds.

The Mausoleum Grounds

The skeletons make their first appearance and need about three shots to kill them. The red and yellow keys are here, together with the yellow jewel.

The Mausoleum

The new enemy here are the Mage – red-robed figures that fire at you. Inside the Mausoleum is the

SUMMARY

The gameplay is brilliant and puts many commercial offerings to shame. We see too many fifty quid Boulderdash clones where all the programming has gone into a fancy animation sequence you could only bear to watch twice. The Catacomb series is a classic. The games have an atmosphere of real tension, as you watch the sphere for the creatures out to get you.

The nagging doubt I have is the EGA compatibility. The game doesn't scroll as smoothly as Wolfenstein, and although the graphics are good they can prove irritating over a long (say three hour) playing session. Some levels, like the Demon's Inferno, are almost painful to play.

That said, I played the series constantly and would hold it up as a shining example of what shareware can do.

I won't compare shareware games with commercial software. This isn't because they are not comparable in terms of quality – they are – but because if you don't like a shareware game you don't pay for it.

The only program to compare with Catacomb is Wolfenstein 3D. The scrolling is smoother in Wolfenstein 3D but the gameplay in Catacomb is better. Luckily it's not a problem; try them for free and see which one you prefer. That's what the shareware philosophy is all about.

red jewel off the Hallowed Hallway, in the Place of Enchanted Cubes. The exit is to the east.

The Crypt Of Nemesis

Flying Demons and Mage attack you and there is a scroll. Off the Chamber of the Undead you will find the red key, in the Sacrificial Altar Room.

The Den Of The Zombies

The entry is the Hall of the Undead and opening off it are various mouldering rooms (shoot at the walls with skeletons in them). You need green and yellow keys. Go NW and into the Subterranean Vault.

The Subterranean Vault

Scroll three here, and the yellow key is off the Large Dusty Room. Blue demons make their first appearance here in the North Tunnels of Doom. They need one or two zappers to melt them. The South Tunnels of Doom lead through the twisted Passages of Death to the Bone Chamber. North of here you will find the Chamber of the Well of Souls. Plunge down it to the Ancient Aqueduct.

The Ancient Aqueduct

The blue jewel and another scroll are here and so are many difficult-to-kill blue meanies, a kind of aquatic troll. The first sign of them is a circle of bubbles. Back off and get ready to use zappers. Leave by the SE corner, off the Southern Channels.

The Orc Mines

The Orcs are dwarfish, under-armed and easy to kill but there are also skeletons here and so is scroll four. To the NW is the Trolls' Gate Access and the gate itself; both need green keys.

The Lair Of The Trolls

The Lair of the Trolls has Trolls – as you might expect – together with orcs. There are two yellow keys here, scroll five and three timers.

The Demons' Inferno

Here are blue demons, skeletons, a yellow key and a timer. Exit is in the far SE corner

The Battleground Of The Titans

Blue demons again and Trolls. Lots of them. There are two huge rooms – demons to the left and Trolls to the right. First gather all the treasure from the niches along the wall. Then brace yourself, make sure your health is at 100% and fire at the left hand wall. Run like hell to the timer and trigger it. You have a minute to collect all the zappers and the red key, run out of the room, open up the middle corridor, kill the three monsters and then wait for the demons to come for you. They will come in through the Dark Way to the Coven of the Mages in a single file and you can pick them off with zappers. Repeat the procedure for the right hand room – the Trolls.

The Coven Of The Mages

There are five transporter gates here. Together with scroll seven and yellow and red keys. Roving eyes will zap you with missiles and the Mage are here in force. The exit is through the third gate.

The Inner Sanctum

Red demons and Mage give you a tough time here. You must pick up two yellow keys, one green and one red. There are timers here and an exit east.

The Haunt Of Nemesis

At last you draw near. Lots of red demons, some held back by zappers. Run in, grab zappers and run away fast, picking them off as they round the corner. Behind some of these red demons, guarding treasure, is Nemesis himself. Use everything you've got and cure yourself often. He will collapse in a heap at your feet, giving up the red key.

The Passage To The Surface

Step over the body of Nemesis and go through the door. Through the Hall of the Fallen heroes you come to a statue of Nemesis. There are two weak walls. To the right is the way to the surface. To the left is a collection of goodies and then the way to the surface. The goodies include three hidden levels, an indestructible mode, lots of extra zappers, time freeze and the a warp to any level.

You can relax knowing you have saved the town again and that Nemesis is dead. But is he? No, like all good horror movies, Catacomb Abyss has a sequel.

CATACOMB ARMAGEDDON

AFTER Catacomb Abyss comes Catacomb Armageddon. Here Nemesis has come back from the dead to menace the world once more. Time for you to sort him out again.

The Towne Of Morbidity

You start in the Towne of Morbidity. The zombies you will remember from Abyss, but here you also have giant ants. These are really disgusting creatures. They are difficult to kill and remain kicking convulsively in their green blood. In the town you must collect two red keys, two yellow, one green and one blue. There is a purple jewel and the exit is directly north from the entrance.

The Dark Forest

Evil trees come for you. Hit them with zappers. They will remain burning so don't back into one. The other inhabitants of the forest are bats. You must find a green key and a yellow jewel. The key is in the Heart of Darkness, beyond the Inner Forest off the North East Clearing. The way out to the Garden of Forgotten Souls is off the Northern Trail.

The Garden Of Forgotten Souls

Look out for zombies, bats, Mage and... killer rabbits. There are four yellow keys here and one red jewel. Exit to the NE.

The Lost City Of The Damned

Three yellow and two red keys. The green jewel is here, off the Hall of Bones. Fight off skeletons and Viper Ladies. The Viper Ladies begin as statues and then come alive, slashing with their scimitars. Forget chivalry, shoot them. Exit to the NE.

The Temple Of Vipers

The entrance is a corridor. The door to your left needs a red key, the door to your right, a green. Blast the wall ahead and there they are. As soon as you enter the temple Viper Ladies attack in force and the Mage put in an appearance. There are two more red keys (in the Altar Room of Southern Light and the Long Hall of Truth) and one green key plus some transporter gates. Through the second astral projection room is the entrance to the Torture Chamber.

The Torture Chambers

Skeletons detach themselves from the walls to attack you and Viper Ladies are here too. Look for two yellow keys and go East via the Snake Like Passages into the Demons' Hold.

The Demons' Hold

Two-headed red demons attack you. Many are confined behind force fields; pull back shoot out the fields and pick off the demons. Five keys here: two green, one red, one blue and one yellow. The blue jewel and treasure are through the gate off the Musty Smelling Room. Go south for the exit. This is just a well. Down you go.

The Ant Colony

You are attacked by ants and green monsters, like ghouls. When you shoot the ghouls their heads swell and explode. The green key is in the East Egg Colony and the yellow is in a Side Tunnel off the Southern Tunnel. Exit NW through the Musty Northern Tunnels and the Western Tunnel.

The Hall Of The Wretched Pox

You do get to some interesting places in this game. The green ghouls are here in force together with roving eyes. Two red keys are here - one in a hidden recess off the Gallery of Misery and the other in a Guarded Key Chamber, also off the Gallery. Get out of here by going NE.

The Lair Of The Succubus

You arrive at the Central Access Chamber. The yellow key gets you through the door on your right.

You are attacked by green ghouls, Mage and the Succubi themselves. These are blue items with big breasts and long brown hair whose method of attack is to send out flaming hearts. No time for sentiment; shoot them.

Three red keys here. Exit to the NE.

The Chamber Of The Evil Eye

Eyes follow and attack you. A red key off the Front Hall and red, blue, green, yellow and purple jewels off the Northern Hall. From the Northern Hall go to the Axis Chamber where there are timers and, just round the corner... Nemesis! Or is it? A bit further and there are more of him, in the Clone Chamber - all is clear now. Exit to the Flaming Inferno SE.

The Flaming Inferno

Another level that is hard on the eyes. You are attacked by two-headed red monsters, Mage and roving eyes. There is a blue key near the exit North.

The Subterranean River

One red and one yellow key. This level has the cutest baddies yet... crocodiles. Unfortunately, they spit fire at you so you can forget any arguments for their conservation.

The Crystal Maze

The most frightening so far - you are trapped in a crap game show. No, it's okay: you just have to fight two-headed red monsters and Mage and find three red keys. The Place of Invisible Walls is the strangest yet in your travels. A huge room, full of enemies and the red key, in which you come against invisible barriers. Sidle along the walls and use missiles to check for gaps. The door here will take you to the Ramparts.

The Ramparts Of Nemesis

Three transporter rooms here. The one of Lost Ways will get you the green key. The Gateway to Defended Treasure will get you the red, the blue key is through the Gateway of the Strident Clone. The Gateway to Certain Termination leads to the approach to the Clones of Nemesis. Ready to die?

The Fortress Of Nemesis

Transporters, Mage and... him again! Do him for sure and then stroll out NNW.

The Passage To The Surface

Bask in your triumph; I mean, that's it. Isn't it?

I'm afraid not. Nemesis is not only back from the dead again, but he's recruited creatures from all ages. Can you go through it all again? The frights? The sudden deaths? The 16 colour EGA display?

CATACOMB APOCALYPSE

EMESIS AND his cohorts have assembled a first team of mutants, robots and a platoon of heavily armed undead. So what? So you've got to sort it out (again). Third time lucky for the world? We'll see.

The Sanctuary Of The Dead

Here is where you meet your new foes. Spectres are shimmering things in black cloaks. They have a single red eye and fire at you. In fact, everything in Apocalypse fires at you. Also here are the wizards – little green buggers with blasting wands. They look like leprechauns from hell.

The Wizard's Garden

Wizards and mechanical flies greet you here. Blue key and yellow jewel are to the NE. The red key is to the West. The blue key takes you through a door to the West which leads to the Graveyard of Fallen Heroes. West again to the Forgotten Plots, the blue key opens a door to the North which leads to a hidden niche with the red key. Go back to the Graveyard. A wall will give way and you will fall into Lost and Forgotten Chambers. Lots of mechanical flies here. West is the yellow jewel and blue key. The red key fits the door to your right which lets you into the Chamber of the Time Gate.

The Chamber Of The Time Wizards

There isn't anything to collect here – except treasure. It's in those strange things that look like photocopiers. Lots of mechanical flies and wizards give you a rough time. Get to the exit as quickly as you can.

The Axis Of The Time Lords

You are at the hub of four corridors each with a time gate. There are rooms off on the left of each corridor, where you will be savaged by Nemesis/Tutenkamen masks.

The Future Node Of Time

Android Mages, mechanical flies, treasure and four keys – two yellow, one blue and one red.

The Fire Node Of Time

When you arrive you see a hovering eye. For the first time in this game DON'T SHOOT IT JUST BECAUSE IT'S THERE. The thing is a maze drone. Now, they are a bit unreliable. Sometimes they will lead you only to good things, other times they will take you straight into an ambush. Be wary.

The Ancient Node Of Time

Lots of wizards, as you'd expect, and blue demons.

The Water Node Of Time

Strange green creatures with periscope heads attack you. Keep firing at them until their hideous heads explode.

The Wizard's Maze

The drones appear again. You can trust them this time although once they've led you to treasure destroy them or you'll be following them forever. Don't panic if they nip round a corner, drones show up as purple on the crystal ball.

The first thing that happens is a fierce attack by yellow trolls from your right and a less serious bit of aggro from some stray wizards to your left. If the drones disappear while all this mayhem is going on, don't worry: they'll come back for you if you stay near the portico.

The Underground Sewers

Remember the skeletons that attacked you with swords way back in The Mausoleum? Nemesis has them tooled up with a kind of Gatling gun. Manta Rays attack you, but they are almost cute. Nothing much here except treasure. Way out to the south.

The Flooded City

Here the Gatling-toting skeletons are on skateboards. Exit through the Protected Chamber of the Time Gate in the North West corner.

The Computer Core

Another crossroads. Gate one opens on the Neural Input Chamber. Drones reappear and lead you into an ambush at the Reserve Storage Area (SW). Never mind, the blue key is near here. The green key is in the NE Reserve Storage Area. Back to the centre and through gate two for the Random Access Conduit.

Gate three leads on to the Open Field Array Area; a huge killing field, use Xterminators to kill everything. Last to be dealt with is gate four, the Primary Receptor Node. Drones attack in force, the door to the East needs the blue key and leads to the Output Conduit Exit. The door to the north needs a green key and leads to the most terrible scenario so far.

The Chamber Of Invisible Horror

"Beware of things you cannot see" flashes up on the message screen. Oh, great. Then missiles just appear out of nowhere. Look carefully at the crystal ball – you will see a little red dot. Orientate yourself and let off salvo after salvo in its direction watching the path of the missiles. When the monsters come on you mob-handed, resort to exterminators. As the invisible monsters take hits, they become slightly more visible, and are completely visible in death. Drones sometimes guide you and sometimes attack you.

The Encounter Chamber

In a large and silent hall missiles drift from across the space. You are faced with three rooms. The room in the centre is the Time Chamber and flanked by storage rooms. Each of the storage rooms has eight chests full of weapons and cure potions. Is someone trying to tell you something? Are things about to get hairy?

The Testing Chamber Of Nemesis

A room right behind you is full of goodies and has a couple of demons. No sweat. In front of you, are the First, Second and Final Testing Rooms of Nemesis. Each contains invisible monsters and clones of Nemesis. They get harder, as you'd expect. Green key in first, yellow in second.

In the final room is Nemesis. He is in his cloister off the top right hand corner. Don't worry, he'll find you. As before, use zappers and cure potions.

You know you've got the real Nemesis because he leaves a red key behind him. The Access Hall to the Final Exit is facing the Final Testing Room. Two demons are here and the Time Gate.

The Passage To The Surface

This leads to a passage and the Central Axis of Extreme Victory. To your left is the Treasure Chamber of the Valiant, crammed with chests of loot. Right off the axis is the Treasure Chamber of the Wise One (full of jewels) and the Keys to the Kingdom of the Pure.

On you go through the Final Passage where your message screen tells you that Nemesis is 'banished forever' – heard it all before. ☑

Silica Systems are pleased to offer an exciting new upgrade, the Amstrad 486 SLC 33MHz 'Mega Plus' PC, which uses the revolutionary 486SLC 33MHz CPU, manufactured by Texas Instruments and jointly developed with Cyrix. This chip is a 33MHz 486 instruction set compatible micro processor with a 32-bit internal data path and power management features. It achieves a new level of processing performance by utilising a single cycle pipelined execution unit, a hardware multiplier, optimised five stage internal pipeline and a tightly coupled 1K internal cache. The hardware multiplier enables integer multiplication up to 8 times faster than the shift - add multiply function used in other 486 CPUs.

Power meter aggregate MIPS performance increases by up to 2 times using the hardware multiplier, which also provides an overall performance of 92MHz using Landmark's latest version Speedcom 2.00 performance benchmark. This is almost 3 times as fast as a 386sx - 25 CPU (see Landmark Speed Chart above). Beware of competitors quoting the older version Landmark 1.14 which often gives misleading benchmarks.

Sega Mega Drive is a Registered Trademark of Sega Enterprises Ltd. The MegaPC is manufactured and sold by Amstrad under licence from Sega Enterprises Ltd.

Why waste time carving your name in stone or constructing huge statues in your honour when you could immortalise yourself by having a letter printed in these pages. Here you can sound off about everything under the sun (or beyond it, why limit yourself?) and perhaps win some software into the bargain.

Solution Abuse

WELL ALL I CAN say is thank you very bloody much for printing those solutions in your first issue. Nothing like going out and spending the best part of fifty quid on a game only to have it completely wrecked by some smart arse who probably got loads of cheats from the programmers.

A. Biley, Cambridge.

I've heard this complaint before and I'm always baffled. If you don't want to know the answer don't read the solution. Would you blame the author of a Who Dunnit for spoiling the book by printing the name of the murderer on the last page? The solutions are intended to help people who are stuck and frustrated in a game and want to progress, they should improve the game for them not ruin it. Ed.

Characteristically Corporate

I NOTICED IN your feature on Lilil Divil (during which you conspicuously failed to explain why Little Devil is spelt Lilil Divil) that you had a go at the obsession companies have with creating their own Sonic or Mario. It's getting a bit stupid isn't it? At the moment you can't move for 'endearing' creatures, all a bit street, all 'with their own character' and all rather crap. What a waste of effort - who cares if the hero taps its foot when you don't touch the keyboard. Let's just concentrate on the game guys. Obviously I don't include Mavis Beacon in this - she's a Goddess whose very name I am unfit to mention.

Mr Spriggs, Blackpool, Lancashire.

You know the saying, if an idea works flog it. Obviously I don't include Mavis Beacon in this... Ed.

Lemmings To You 2 Mate

HOW CAN YOU possibly have not given the excellent Lemmings 2 over 90%. I know you'll claim it was a sequel rather than a completely new idea and your score explanation claims that Zone Classics only go to 'Original' ideas but that didn't stop Ultima Underworld 2 virtually going off the score board. The reviewer obviously liked the Lemmings game, he even went so far as to say that it was better than the original which scored 90+ in every magazine I read and would presumably have done the same in PC Zone if it had been around then. Or would you have had to be different with that too? You might at least try to be consistent in your scoring.

Steve Fallon, Batley, W. Yorks.

By being consistent do you mean that our scores should all be decided by a committee? Reviews and scores are bound to be subjective. One of the reasons we give each game so much coverage is so that readers will be able to see what the game is like as well as what the reviewer thinks of it. That way you can make your own mind up. Ed.

Spend Spend Spend

CALL ME AN out of touch old fool if you like (Okay you're an out of touch old fool. Ed) but I don't think PC games are particularly overpriced. There you are, I said it. Now I'd be the first to admit that £40 is quite a lot of money. (Quite? Ed) but look at it this way. The development time that goes into a game can be similar to, or even greater than that which goes into a film and with the same lack of guaranteed return. How much does it cost to go and see a film? Let's say about £5 for about 2 hours entertainment (About £2.50 an hour). The average game would take up about 30 hours playing time

LETTER OF THE MONTH

Each month we'll be sending a rather smart piece of software to the author of the Letter Of The Month. Sad really that we have to bribe you to write in but there you go.

Scotzone

Look I don't want to give the impression that I'm one of these paranoid people who sees conspiracies wherever they go. I'm not (No matter what other people say). However when reading through your first issue I couldn't help but notice how many Mcs you had working for you. Two MacDonalds, a McCandless and a McCarthy. "Probably just a coincidence" I thought. Then I noticed the name of your Deputy Editor. Laurence Scotford. Is this some form of Celtic conspiracy? I think we should be told.

J. Docherty, Brentford, London.

It's all a lie do you hear? Okay so we are planning to publish issue three in Gaelic but that is a complete coincidence. Ed.

and would cost say about £40, which works out at £1.33 an hour. What a bargain.

If you're not convinced by that argument what about the price of videos? And at least no one is expected to pay over £100 for a beat 'em-up like certain sad console owners I know.

G. Turner, Peterborough, Cambs.

In relation to console games PC games are not expensive, though the £100+ price for Streetfighter 2, (which I assume is the game you're referring to) was exceptional and for imports not the official release. The danger is, of course, that Software companies will think that if the console market can support such high prices then the supposedly older and more affluent PC market can go even higher. Ed.

Perfectly Paranoid

LAST MONTH you ran a letter from someone who wanted to know the identity of the people who develop and distribute viruses. The writer assumed that their motives were entirely evil. He didn't seem to consider the possibility that viruses might be being developed by the people who develop the virus killers - to make them appear like saviours and to make sure there's enough work available for them. I think Keynes proposed similar ideas in the 1930s, though he was thinking more of holes in the ground than Cascade and Jerusalem. Not so much evil as sound economics.

Lindsay Smith, Kettering, Northamptonshire.

I thought evil and sound economics were the same thing. As for your nice idea, I suppose you also think that doctors release infections into the community just to keep themselves busy. Oh and John Lennon was shot by the CIA too. Ed.

Platforms To The People

I GET REALLY pissed off when people slag off Blackburn Rovers just because they're now successful, as if there's something great about supporting a side that always loses. (Er... are you sure you've got the right magazine? Ed.) Similarly all those people who whinge about platform or arcade games appearing on the PC are pathetic snobs. (Now that's what I call a weak link. Do you fancy a job? Ed) What are they worried about? That people might start thinking they've bought a games machine? That they'll be laughed at? We need more variety on the PC not less.

Malcolm Webster, Blackburn, Lancashire.

Yes, but I'm still not entirely sure what this has got to do with Blackburn Rovers. Ed.

Mavis v Mario

AFTER READING your shock revelation concerning Mavis Beacon I decided not to buy her typing program but instead to buy Mario Teaches Typing. Now someone's told me Mario doesn't exist either! What am I to do?

T. Finney, Greenwich, London.

I have several suggestions but unfortunately two of them are illegal and one of them is somewhat biologically ambitious. Ed.

NEW! Shareware From 10p

We are proud to announce the release of our BRAND NEW disk catalogue, using Visual Basic for DOS we have produced the BEST catalogue available in the U.K. Unlike the other shareware vendors we allow you to place as many compressed programs onto the supplied disks as will fit. This can take program prices down to as little as 10p !! Our catalogue has a Windows type interface and full context sensitive help with a choice of 14,000 dos & Windows v3.x programs, the program works out how many disks are needed from your selection and produces an order for you. Our existing customers say we have an "..Excellent Service", with "..Superb value..", including a "..Vast range.." of shareware, in all "You are the BEST." To find out why we "..are the BEST.." send two first class stamps NOW & we'll send you the BEST disk catalogue in the U.K. (Only available on 3.5" disks, Hard disk needed!)

Deluxe Games II

"..Simply put this is the best compilation of PC games available - commercial or otherwise..", 92% Rating PC FORMAT

"..Good Value!..the balance is towards QUALITY..especially if you want games to suit a variety of skills and ages" PC REVIEW

This compilation is aimed at QUALITY not quantity, the 70 (DOS based) games that make up this compilation include Wolfenstein 3-D, Cosmo's Cosmic Adventure & Jill of the Jungle, these are some of the best games available today. Our menu driven installation program installs over 22mb of games from the supplied 14 x 3.5" disks, and there is also a menu system already setup to run them all. For a Special Offer we are offering this at ONLY £15.95 +1.25 p&p (£17.20). Min. Vga Screen: 640k & Hard Disk.

BUYER'S GUIDE

Welcome to the reference bit. It's not just your average computer games mag reference bit; this is the most up-to-date, the most relevant, and the most comprehensive reference bit ever seen in the world of PC games mags. If you want to know how many flight simulations published by MicroProse are still available, if you have a burning desire to play a particular graphic adventure, but can't remember the title, or if you just want to know what time the number 63 bus runs at, you'll find the answers here*. Below are your instructions for using the Buyer's Guide. We'll print them only once, so digest them carefully, and then tear out this entire page and eat it. (Or should that be the other way round?)

*Erm... unfortunately there was no room to include the bus timetable this month. Ah what the hell the bloody buses never stick to the sodding timetable anyway.

- Each month we will print a list of most* of the PC games and leisure products that are still available. You won't find us including those useless lists of 'Classic' games, that are old enough for your grandfather to remember and which you can't get hold of for love nor money.
- The games are listed in several categories, so that you won't have to wade through seemingly endless Quest games from Sierra, just to find a flight sim from Dynamix.
- One classic game from each category will be highlighted every month for your special attention. These games merit an individual mention because (a) they're bloody brilliant, (b) the publisher slipped us a tenner in the post, or (c) they're crap, but the editor bought them and doesn't see why he should be the only one with an embarrassing software collection.
- We will also highlight one or more categories each month which we'll expand to include a little bit of extra information on each of the listed games, like what our personal high scores are, what sort of interesting cardboard sculptures we were able to make out of the packaging, or, as a last resort, something relevant.
- If your fancy is taken by a particular title, just follow these simple steps: i) make a note of the publisher; ii) look up its number in the terribly handy 'phone list next to this section; iii) dial the number, wait for a reply and the following conversation will ensue: "Hello, Megasoft, how can I help you?" "Listen here my good man, I've seen your game listed in the best PC games reference guide in the world..." "Oh, you mean the one in PC Zone?" "Yes, that's the fellow. Anyhow, I've seen your absolutely spiffing game mentioned, and I thought, 'Yes, I'd like a crack at that', so here I am, ready to part with my er... readies, for a brand spanking new copy, what!"
- Now complete the transaction, by arranging payment via your credit card, or obtaining a list of your friendly local software vendors, and the game will soon be yours.
- Be kind to animals, don't talk to strangers, remember to wash behind your ears, and make sure you get your PC Zone fix every month.

*We could have said all, but even we aren't perfect. Yes, it's hard to believe, we know.

PHONE LIST

Here we have possibly the most scintillating bit of the Buyers Guide, the 'phone list. You'll notice that many of the numbers are the same, but don't worry, it's not a misprint, many of these companies are distributed through another company in the UK, and where this is the case we've printed the number of the distributor, and the name of the distributor in brackets. Happy 'phoning.

BUYER'S GUIDE

CLASSIC ACTION

LIFE AND DEATH (MINDSCAPE, £19.99)
Given a choice of things to simulate on the humble PC, it takes a warped mind to come up with a simulation of abdominal surgery. Someone at Software Toolworks evidently has a very warped mind since this is exactly what Life and Death is all about. Having correctly diagnosed the patient (are you sure it's his appendix? You don't want to be opening him up just to cure stomach cramps after all), you must skilfully slice and stitch until the problem is resolved. It's all good fun, very messy and definitely not for the squeamish.

CLASSIC ACTION/ADVENTURE

D-GENERATION (MINDSCAPE, £19.99)
D-Generation is quite a recent game, although you wouldn't think so to look at it. Don't take that as a negative remark, for this game's major quality is that it revives the quaint old fashioned idea of keeping graphics and sound pleasantly simple. You'd better sit down now because we're about to introduce a novel concept. It's called good gameplay, and D-Generation has bags of it. It's essentially an unoriginal isometric exploration and puzzle game which could have been written in the mid-Eighties, but for that it is more enjoyable and better value for money than some of the audio-visual extravaganzas that publishers fob us off with these days. Suck it and see!

CLASSIC ADVENTURE

THE SECRET OF MONKEY ISLAND (LUCASFILMS, £30.64)
The turning point for LucasFilms as a game producer came with this game. Beforehand it had been responsible for some good but not particularly inspired games, but this is a gem. Excellent graphics, a goods soundtrack and plenty of humour. What really makes Monkey Island so special is the well-thought out plot. Guybrush Threepwood has always wanted to be a pirate and have plenty of adventures, and so he does. There's romance, a bit of supernatural, and plenty of verbal swashbuckling. It's a feature you really can't afford to miss.

CLASSIC BEAT 'EM-UP/HACK 'EM-UP

PITFIGHTER (DOMARK, £29.99)
Considering that the popular coin-op used state of the art imaging hardware to achieve many of its visual effects, development team Tecque made a pretty good job of converting it. The sprite scaling that made the original game look so good has been recreated expertly and it turns what could have so easily been a so-so game into a reasonably good one that will appeal to beat 'em-up fans.

ACTION

Hmmm, this is tricky, how do you define a term that is not merely alien to the entire PC Zone team, but actually fundamentally opposes our philosophy of life. Well, here goes anyway. These are the sort of games that appeal to the people who like a bit of excitement in their lives. None of this namby-pamby cerebral stuff for them. They like runny, jumpy, sweaty under the armpits stuff. So here they are, games in which the emphasis is on twiddling your joystick rather than putting on a brown anorak and dashing down to the British Library to do a bit of pre-game research.

ACTION/ADVENTURE

If, like most of the PC Zone team, you love adventure games but have poor reading and writing skills, then why not try adventures which demand a bit of good old fashioned joystick athleticism. These are games for the Conans of the computer world rather than the Sherlocks.

HIGHLIGHTED THIS ISSUE

ADVENTURE

From the days of 'GO NORTH, FIGHT SQUIRREL, STEAL NUTS', adventures have advanced at a cracking pace. Nowadays its not so much the plot that counts, more like the stars and the special effects. We've heard rumours that Guybrush Threepwood is demanding a cool $6 million to star in a third Monkey Island extravaganza. Watch this space!

AMAZON (ACCESS, £45.99)

A pretty typical Access product. Typical in that it makes use of leading edge technology to marry video images and conventional bitmapped images, but it doesn't really hang together as a game. It's set in the South American jungle (but you've probably guessed that by now), and is a rather lame pastiche of adventure movies. Looks nice in places though.

AN AMERICAN TAIL (ACCOLADE, £29.99)

The Spielberg kiddies movie gets a pretty mediocre deal out of this animated game. It's a shame that the great man himself doesn't have any hand in making the computer games that are licensed from his films. Perhaps then they wouldn't all be so crap.

BAT 2 (UBI SOFT, £39.99)

A strange combination of adventure, strategy and action. It uses an attractive but ultimately unwieldy windowing system.

CONQUEST OF THE LONGBOW (SIERRA ON-LINE, £39.99)

Even Sierra's worst adventures are worth playing, which I suppose is a round about way of saying that it knows how to design adventure games. Conquest of the Longbow isn't one of the best pieces of software to come out of the company, but it's worth playing just to laugh at modern American ideas of romance being applied inadequately to a quintessentially English legend.

CRIME CITY (IMPRESSIONS, £29.99)

Your father has been wrongly accused of murder, and you are the only one who can prove his innocence. So begins Crime City a competent but lacklustre attempt to do the modern detective thriller on computer.

CRUISE FOR A CORPSE (DELPHINE, £30.99)

A graphically stunning adventure which was a departure from Delphine's previous two Cinematique products inasmuch as it's lost the linearity of its predecessors and there is a greater emphasis on interacting with other characters. There has been a murder on the cruise ship you are taking your holiday on, and it's up to you to investigate. Good fun.

DARKSEED (CYBERDREAMS, £39.99)

This potentially brilliant idea (integrating the graphics of H.R. Giger into a science fiction adventure), is a disappointment because, while it's stunning to look at, it's been so badly designed that solving it becomes a tedious process of trial and error. Leave well alone unless you're a Giger fanatic.

ETERNAM (INFOGRAMMES, £35.99)

Stunning adventure game set in a futuristic planet-sized theme park. Its main attraction is the clever integration of animated sequences into a well thought out plot.

GATEWAY (ACCOLADE, £34.99)

An attempt to recreate Frederik Pohl's classic science-fiction work as an adventure game. It works pretty well provided that you can get along with Legend's quirky text and graphics interface.

HEART OF CHINA (DYNAMIX, £39.99)

Visually stunning, with a great soundtrack and an exciting plot, but you'll finish it in two days. You do at least get to blow a seagull to bits, which is some consolation if you're sick. Then again, sick is exactly what you're going to be when you discover you've just shelled out forty quid for one weekend's entertainment.

HITCHHIKERS GUIDE TO THE GALAXY (VIRGIN GAMES, £9.99)

An early infocom text adventure written in collaboration with Douglas Adams and well worth a second visit.

HOME ALONE II (ACCOLADE, £29.99)

Look, if you like the little wonderbrat that much, then go out, rent the video, buy a couple of cans of Theakstons and some beer nuts, go home, watch the film and congratulate yourself on saving twenty-five quid and many tedious moments in front of your computer.

INDIANA JONES AND THE FATE OF ATLANTIS - THE ADVENTURE GAME (LUCASFILMS, £37.99)

Quite brilliant. The one graphic adventure that everyone should have in their collection. There are three different ways to play the game which compensates for it being a little too easy. A gem.

KINGS QUEST IV (SIERRA ON-LINE, £29.99)

The last of the Interminable King's Quest series to be rendered in garish EGA. In this one you play the Princess Rosella, on a quest to find the magic fruit that will cure her father. It's all incredibly twee, but...

KINGS QUEST V (SIERRA ON-LINE, £44.99)

... It gets even more twee, although slightly less garish, in this one, entitled Absence Makes the Heart Go Yonder, which has King Graham (Since when were royalty given names like Graham?) returning home to find his family have been kidnapped by some ruthless villains. That'll teach him to work late at the office!

KINGS QUEST VI (SIERRA ON-LINE, £44.99)

Yet more sloppy but rather enjoyable nonsense from Roberta Williams, who is the computer entertainment world's answer to Barbara Cartland.

LOOM (LUCASFILMS, £35.75)

A charming fantasy very well received by everyone, but about as challenging as finding sad looking bits of lettuce in a Big Mac. You play Bobbin Threadbare, the reluctant hero struggling to a master a musical form of magic. This gives rise to scenes that vaguely resemble that kiddies music programme with Jonathan Cohen.

THE LOST FILES OF SHERLOCK HOLMES (ELECTRONIC ARTS, £39.99)

One of the better recent attempts at creating an adventure game based on the exploits of the world's most famous fictional detectives. It has a completely new case for Holmes and Watson to solve, and uses a fairly traditional looking graphic adventure interface, with a menu at the bottom of the screen and items being manipulated by clicking on them in the main display. Other games are promised in the same series.

LURE OF THE TEMPTRESS (VIRGIN GAMES, £35.99)

The first of Revolution Software's Virtual Theatre system. At first sight it looks like any other graphic adventure, but the clever interface allows more detailed character interaction than most. You can, for example, give other characters in the game a whole list of instructions and they will quite happily go off and carry them out.

MARTIAN MEMORANDUM (ACCESS, £40.99)

A second game to use the superb graphics system employed in Countdown. Unfortunately this game, like its predecessor, has serious flaws in the gameplay department. The plot is basically a futuristic detective story set on Mars, but it's not as engaging as it sounds.

OPERATION STEALTH (DELPHINE, £30.64)

The second Cinematic game is quite unashamedly a rip-off of the James Bond novels and films, and the main character even looks like Timothy Dalton, but for all its unoriginality it's a great game, slightly more challenging than Future Wars, and with a brilliant soundtrack.

PLANETS EDGE -

THE POINT OF NO RETURN (NEW WORLD COMPUTING, £40.99)

A so-so graphic adventure from the makers of Night and Magic, in which you must investigate the disappearance of the Earth.

POLICE QUEST 1 - IN PURSUIT OF THE DEATH ANGEL (SIERRA ON-LINE, £29.99)

An adventure game written by Jim Walls, an ex-police officer. It recreates, as best as possible, real police procedure. You must patrol the streets of the town of Lytton, dealing with petty crimes as well as solving one major case.

POLICE QUEST 2 - THE VENGEANCE (SIERRA ON-LINE, £29.99)

A graphically improved follow up to the first game in which you are once again on the trail of the Death Angel.

POLICE QUEST 3 - THE KINDRED (SIERRA ON-LINE, £39.99)

The latest and easily the best of the series in which you hunt down a serial killer whose latest attempted target has been your own wife. Be warned: it's aimed at the adult market so is pretty graphic.

QUEST FOR GLORY 1 (SIERRA ON-LINE, £39.99)

A re-release of the first game in the series, originally titled Hero Quest, now rewritten with the Sierra Creative Interface.

QUEST FOR GLORY 3 - WAGES OF WAR (SIERRA ON-LINE, £39.99)

Most graphically impressive of the series, in which you attempt to bring peace to the land. Unlike Sierra's other adventures, this one features a sort of half-hearted role-playing element including plenty of combat.

RISE OF THE DRAGON (DYNAMIX, £39.99)

The first adventure game from Dynamix still looks and sounds great. The Bladerunner style plot is enhanced by very atmospheric sound and tremendous graphics. The whole thing is sadly let down by a difficult interface and there's not enough of it.

THIS MONTH'S CLASSIC:
THE SECRET OF MONKEY ISLAND (LUCASFILMS, £30.64)
(See box-off for review)

THE SECRET OF MONKEY ISLAND 2 - LE CHUCKS REVENGE (LUCASFILMS, £35.99)

A brilliant follow-up to the first adventure to feature Guybrush. This one is the first LucasFilms game to use the excellent iMuse system which changes the music seamlessly as you pass from one location to another.

SHERLOCK HOLMES I [CD] (MINDSCAPE, £59.99)

This wowed everyone when it first appeared, mainly because of its clever use of real-time video sequences. In fact the programmers and designers cheated by confining movement to a small part of the frame, thus cutting down both speed and memory restrictions. Nevertheless the three cases are fun to solve.

SHERLOCK HOLMES II [CD] (MINDSCAPE, £59.99)

More of the same with even more impressive video clips.

SPACE QUEST 1 - THE SARIAN ENCOUNTER (SIERRA ON-LINE, £39.99)

A re-release of the classic comic space adventure. This one uses the non-typing SCI interface and has greatly improved graphics and sound.

SPACE QUEST 4 - ROGER WILCO AND THE TIME RIPPERS (SIERRA ON-LINE, £39.99)

A hilarious self-parody of the Space Quest story in which Roger travels back and forth in time to visit other games in the series.

STAR TREK: 25TH ANNIVERSARY (ELECTRONIC ARTS, £34.99)

A brilliant recreation of the classic television series. This game combines space combat with graphic adventure in a series of episodes, each of which is true to the spirit of the original, right down to the badinage between the three central characters.

WAXWORKS (ACCOLADE, £34.99)

A feast of gore which will appeal to the sick-minded but should probably be avoided by everyone else. Horrorsoft's game's are always very good, but this one is just a little too overindulgent.

WILLY BEAMISH (DYNAMIX, £39.99)

A cute American schoolkid may not be the most obvious hero for an adventure game but Dynamix have made a reasonably good job of making Willy Beamish into one.

Frankly the gameplay doesn't really rise much beyond the cute appeal, but as an alternative to hack and slash or science fiction it stands up fairly well.

ZORK (VIRGIN GAMES, £9.99)

The most famous Infocom text adventure is pretty faithful to the spirit of Crowther and Wood's Colossal Caves, but introduces many inventive ideas. The plot has you exploring a huge underground kingdom in which there are strange creatures and loads of puzzle to contend with Thoroughly absorbing (Yes! Even without graphics!)

ZORK II - THE WIZARD OF FROBOZZ (VIRGIN GAMES, £9.99)

Journey onwards in the underground kingdom under the malign eye of the great wiz. Excellent stuff.

ZORK III - THE DUNGEON MASTER (VIRGIN GAMES, £9.99)

The concluding part of the Zork trilogy, and a final confrontation with the Dungeon Master himself (Eek!)

BEAT 'EM-UP/ HACK 'EM-UP

Let's face it, if you're one of those people who regularly gets sand kicked in your face by six year-olds, there's nothing better than getting home and working out your frustration with a quick game of International Karate. Provided you can persuade your kid sister to let you have your machine back without getting beaten up again.

Blade Warrior (Zeppelin, £7.99)

Budokan (Electronic Arts, £10.99)

Deathbringer (Empire, £25.99)

Double Dragon (Virgin Games, £9.99)

Double Dragon II (Virgin Games, £9.99)

Golden Axe (Virgin Games, £9.99)

International Karate (Addictive £4.99)

Knight Force (Titus, £9.99)

Kung-Fu Warrior (Addictive, £9.99)

Madshow (Addictive, £2.99)

Manhattan Dealers (Addictive, £2.99)

Moonstone (Mindscape, £30.99)

Ninja Rabbits (Microvalue, £9.99)

THIS MONTH'S CLASSIC:
PITFIGHTER (DOMARK, £29.99)
(See box-off for review)

Wild Streets (Titus, £9.99)

BOARD, TABLE, CARD & CASINO

Now what was that justification for paying twice as much for a computer board game as you'd pay for the original? Oh yes, there aren't any pieces to lose. Doesn't stop you from feeling stupid when you lug your PC round to the relatives at Christmas just so you can play Trivial Pursuit though!

Arcade Fruit Machine (Zeppelin, £7.99)

Backgammon (Addictive, £4.99)

Blackjack (Addictive, £4.99)

Bridge Player 2150 Galactic
(CP Software, £30.60)

Casino (Accolade, £29.99)

Casinos Of The World (Accolade, £34.99)

Deluxe Trivial Pursuit (Domark, £29.99)

Go Simulator (Infogrames, £30.99)

THIS MONTH'S CLASSIC:
HONG KONG MAH JONG (ELECTRONIC ARTS, £29.99)
(See box-off for review)

Hoyles Book of Games

(Sierra On-Line, £39.99)

Hoyles Book Of Games 3

(Sierra On-Line, £39.99)

Lots-O-Slots (Accolade, £14.99)

Micro Bridge Companion (Requires Windows) (Mindscape, £34.99)

Omar Sharif's Bridge

(Oxford Softworks, £39.99)

Poker (Accolade, £14.99)

Ragnarok (Mirage, £39.99)

Theatre of War (360, £34.99)

CLASSIC BOARD, CARD & CASINO

HONG KONG MAH JONG (ELECTRONIC ARTS, £29.99)
This Far Eastern variation on Rummy hasn't been given as much attention by games publishers as it deserves, so this first class simulation from Electronic Arts is very welcome. The principle of the game is to be the first to play all your tiles by matching up groups of three or four. Points are awarded depending on the quality of your hand, some combinations being harder to obtain and therefore awarded more points. There are plenty of thrills, like digitised animation of your opponents and some speech, but these are just bonuses, the real attraction is that the computer plays at a wide range of skill levels, so this game is accommodating to beginners while still providing a challenge to expert players.

CLASSIC CHESS

BATTLECHESS (ELECTRONIC ARTS, £10.99)

It was fairly evident that from the moment someone came up with an algorithm for a chessplaying program that it wouldn't be too long before someone else decided to marry the artificial intelligence to the computer's graphics capability, so that the peices could actually do battle for real. There are many chess programs which now incorporate this option, but Battlechess was the first and is still one of the best. The animation is very amusing. Highly recommended at this price.

CLASSIC COMPILATION/DOUBLE PACK

ULTIMA TRILOGY II (ORIGIN, £39.99)

If you haven't got around to adding the Ultima games of Richard Garriot to your collection, then this is a cheap way of getting numbers IV-VI. Set in the legendary land of Britannia, you take on the role of Avatar, a visitor from our world. The general tone of each game is that something is seriously wrong in the kingdom, and it is up to you put it right. On the surface, these games seem to be fairly average examples of the Role Playing genre, but once you become involved with the characters and the various goings on in Britannia, you will begin to appreciate the depth and intricate storylines which have generated a cult following for Richard Garriot's creation.

CLASSIC DRIVING/MOTOR RACING

INDY 500 (ELECTRONIC ARTS, £29.99)

Although it's getting a bit long in the tooth now, this racing game is still good fun to play. It was the first to bring a realistic feel to racing games by applying the sort of 3D technologies previously reserved for flight simulators. Features include a series of external views and a replay facility that allows you to relive the most dramatic moments. While it certainly doesn't compare with Grand Prix as a realistic simulation of motor racing, Indy 500 still has plenty to recommend it.

BUYER'S GUIDE

CLASSIC FLIGHT, SUB & TANK SIMS

CHUCK YEAGER'S AIR COMBAT (ELECTRONIC ARTS, £34.99)
The first flight sim to introduce 'What If...' scenarios in which you get the opportunity to fly a P-51 against a MiG-21 or some other improbable combination. In a more realistic vein, there is a series of some thirty missions based on actual events during World War II, the Korean War and the conflict in Vietnam which you can fly individually or as a campaign. The emphasis is on dogfighting, although there are a couple of reconnaissance missions. The format makes this simulation good fun and easy to get into, although the lack of a proper campaign will put off some people. The graphics are bitmapped rather than filled polygons, so it also looks a lot more attractive than many of its competitors. Highly recommended.

CLASSIC KIDS' STUFF

WHERE IN THE USA IS CARMEN SANDIEGO? - DELUXE EDITION (BRODERBUND, £45.99)
The first of the Carmen Sandiego games still has a lot going for it if you're looking for an educational product that encourages reading and research. The objective is to track down and capture members of VILE, a criminal organisation headed by the notorious master thief, Carmen Sandiego. Clues are provided in a number of locations across the USA, and must be followed up by looking them up in the Encyclopaedia that is provided. Older children will find the process quite compelling.

CLASSIC PLATFORM

PRINCE OF PERSIA (DOMARK, £24.99)
The quality of the animation is what makes this excellent game stand out from the crowd. Real human motion was extensively studied so that the sprites representing the characters within the game move fluidly and realistically as they run, jump and fight. It really is a joy to watch, and there's plenty of gameplay to back up the nice visuals. You race against time to escape the dungeons of the Grand Vizier and rescue the obligatory princess. As well as the usual running and jumping, there's some sword play and plenty of well thought out puzzles.

CLASSIC PUZZLE

BOULDERDASH (ADDICTIVE, £2.99)
The game that launched a thousand clones. Boulderdash is one of those deceptively simple ideas that makes for a game so infuriatingly addictive that you need to order in twice your normal supply of midnight oil. You play the mining chappie Rockford, whose main objective in life is to collect as many gems as he possibly can do. The problem is that, in the process of collecting gems, he has to eat away sections of earth, and this may cause boulders or gems to fall and crush him. The game then becomes moments of nightmare uncertainty about which way to go next followed by mad dashes beneath rows of boulders in a desperate attempt to get from A to B with all the relevant soft bits still attached. Great fun, and great value at this price.

CHESS

So you think that Nigel Short is a pussycat huh? Wouldn't stand a chance against your infamous Double Sicilian Knight's Best Mate's Gambit Cop This Matey manoeuvre? Well you'd better get in practice for the next World Championship then hadn't you?

PUZZLE

Puzzle games tend to divide into two types. There are those like Puzznic which almost entirely involve brainwork, and there are those like Tetris which require fast reaction skills as well. The PC is a breeding ground for puzzle games, and the current selection should grow at a rate of knots.

ROLE-PLAYING GAMES

Role-playing games have their roots in a table-top tradition that extends back to the late sixties when the now legendary Gary Gygax began putting his mind to creating the first rule set for Dungeons and Dragons. This and many other rule sets like Tunnels and Trolls and Runesque now have a huge following. Computer versions add a new visual aspect to the games, and make them really accessible to solo players or small groups.

CLASSIC ROLE PLAYING GAMES

DUNGEON MASTER (PSYGNOSIS, £34.99)
 It took a long time for FTL's masterpiece to make it to the PC, and all credit must go to Psygnosis for having the courage to release it in its original form with the likes of

Eye of the Beholder and Ultima Underworld already on the shelves. Perhaps not surprisingly Dungeon Master has stood the test of time very well. Alright, the dungeons look as if they have a cleaner who comes round every evening at six to wipe up all the blood and guts and dust off all the magic items, and, yes the monsters do look like rejects from a Ray Harryhausen animation, but the game has been superbly designed and you'll become engrossed enough to forget the slightly naff audio-visuals.

CLASSIC SERIOUS SOFTWARE

MAVIS BEACON TEACHES TYPING II (MINDSCAPE, £35.99)
 I'll let you into a secret... Mavis Beacon doesn't actually exist. Yes, I know, it's like that awful moment when the horrible truth about

Santa Claus finally dawns on you. The editor has been traumatised ever since he was forced to face up to the fact, but the therapy is working and he can now approach most typewriter keyboards without bursting into floods of tears. Seriously though, this is a cheap and effective alternative to taking lessons and is highly recommended to hunt and peck artists.

CLASSIC SHOOT 'EM-UP

NOVA 9 (SIERRA ON-LINE, £29.99)
 Sierra took a break from its usual run of adventure games when it created the modern Battlezone clone, Stellar 7. This update of that earlier games adds greater depth, with some strategic elements, but the main attraction is the improved gameplay resulting from better and smoother graphics. There's also a fairly sickly sweet storyline (well, this is a Sierra game), but you'll probably want to ignore that and get on with shooting things instead.

CLASSIC SMUT!

SPELLCASTING 201: THE SORCEROR'S APPLIANCE (ACCOLADE, £19.99)
 The Infocom text adventure that really made Steve Meretzky's name as an author of funny risqué material was Leather

Goddesses of Phobos. Since then he's gone on to stun the world with his slightly more graphical spellcasting series. These are based on the exploits of Ernie Eaglebeak, inept student of the magical arts. Wizards it seems, spend most of their time preoccupied with rather more earthy matters, namely, buxom blondes. The humour never gets distasteful, and there's actually quite a good adventure here, if you can cope with the quirky interface.

BUYER'S GUIDE

CLASSIC SPACE COMBAT & STRATEGY

WING COMMANDER I (ORIGIN, £19.99)

Chris Roberts proved with this game that there were still plenty of things that could be done with 3D on the current crop of machines provided you weren't adverse to cheating. His 3D ships with bitmapped surfaces look very impressive, but he's made them flat as pancakes so that he only has two surfaces to worry about. Despite all its graphical and aural splendour, this is really only a glorified shoot 'em-up, but it's very engaging for a short while.

CLASSIC SPORT

PRO TENNIS TOUR 2 (UBI SOFT, £34.99)

Many have tried to create the definitive Tennis Simulation, but few have come as close as Ubi Soft did with this one. While it isn't the most visually stunning sports simulation there ever was, the visual element is quite adequate and is more than compensated for by the gameplay. The trouble with many tennis games is that the control method is so unwieldy that by the time you've done everything necessary to hit the ball it's already bouncing off the head of a line judge and into the crowd. This one has a simple control method which requires some skill to master, but results in a challenging, and above all, playable game.

CLASSIC STRATEGY

POPULOUS (ELECTRONIC ARTS, £10.99)

A revolutionary game that everyone should own. You play a god responsible for a tribe of warlike people who are engaged in an interminable struggle with another tribe of people, who also have a god backing them. Your little people roam over a 3D landscape which must be flattened so that they can settle. You also have an arsenal of effects ranging from earthquakes to floods with which you can lay low the opposition. There are 500 different landscapes to conquer, or you can link two machines together and play against a human opponent. It's very addictive and well worth having at this price.

CLASSIC WARGAMES

UMS II

(MICROPROSE, £40.87) Intergalactic's masterpiece is not for the casual wargamer. It requires a lot of effort to set up a full scenario, but it's well worth it for the serious student of wars past and present. Because UMS II is 100% data driven, virtually any parameter can be changed thus allowing the user to set up combat simulation for any period of time and using any sort of technology in a variety of terrains and weather conditions. In theory it should be the only war game you ever buy, but in practice you'll probably want something with a bit more colour every now and then.

SPACE COMBAT AND STRATEGY

Never mind the fact that games designers seem to have no more idea about the physics of outer space than film makers, space based shoot 'em-ups have had a firm following ever since David Braben created the grand-daddy of them all, Elite. Now that Elite 2 is imminent, you might want to wait before buying one, but if you're anxious for a tussle with a tentacled tourist from Tau Ceti then peruse the list below.

SPORT

Inford Christie is a bit of a funny old geezer, isn't he. He gets up at ridiculous hours of the morning in the freezing cold, to train for a race, he doesn't eat crappy food from MacDonald's, prefers orange juice to five pints of Carling Black Label and probably goes to bed early. If he had any sense he'd buy himself a PC and a copy of Summer Challenge, then he could go out boozing with his mates, come back roaring drunk after eating two packets of greasy chips and a dodgy kebab, and still be in good enough condition for a 100 metre sprint.

STRATEGY

At last we come to the section that the PC was made for. Strategy games, probably by virtue of the fact that they don't always need pretty graphics and stunning sound, have been around since the very first PC was launched back in 1981. Whether your taste is for building a city, or establishing your very own railway network, you'll find it all here.

MINI COMPO

Some Microsoft Magic

Cicrosoft has been expanding its horizons recently - it's now got its sights firmly fixed on entertainment software as well as its well-known line of operating systems, programming languages and business software. Now PC Zone and Microsoft are giving three lucky readers the chance to sample the first fruits of Microsoft's games development. Each winner will receive a copy of Entertainment Pack IV, Microsoft Golf, and Flight Simulator. Please remember that Microsoft Golf and Entertainment Pack IV can only be run under Windows 3.0 or better, or OS/2.

All you have to do to get your hands on these lovely goodies is answer these three simple questions:

1) Microsoft's successful chairman and founder is:

- (a) Bill Shepherd
- (b) Bill Gates
- (c) Richard Branson

2) Windows is:

- (a) A double-glazing manufacturer
- (b) A recently discovered philosophical treatise by Kafka
- (c) A popular front end for MSDOS

3) Which of these is not published by MicroProse?

- (a) Elderly Mutant Berserker Goldfish for Windows
- (b) MSDOS 5
- (c) Microsoft C

Send your answers on the back of a postcard or sealed envelope, together with your name and address to: Microsoft Magic, PC Zone, 19 Bolsover Street, London, W1P 7JH. Entries must be received by 6 May.

ZONE ware

If you're looking for Shareware that's both high quality and fun, you've come to the right place. PC Zone has selected some rather brilliant games and utilities and put them together on the PC Zone Selection disks.

NOTE: Shareware entitles you to try before you buy. Registration costs are usually a fraction of comparable commercial software and they also entitle you to documentation, user support and upgrades.

WordUp Graphics Toolkit v3.0 for Turbo C++ PRICE £4.50

This disk contains about 50 example files showing how to use the WGT library for Turbo C++ 1.0 or better. DETAILED examples include a Pacman like game, Space Invaders, a top view dungeon game, a side view platform game, and much more...

The library includes a sprite editor and an animation library for sprites and 4-way scrolling. Everything you require to write your own action games.. Requires Turbo C++ and 1.3 Mb of disk space.

TO EXTRACT THE FILES:

- 1) Make a directory on your hard disk – "MD CWGT"
  - 2) Make your current directory – "C:" and "CDWGT"
  - 3) Then, if your floppy is A: type "A:" and then "Extract A:" or if your floppy is B: type "B:" and then "Extract B:" (The EXTRACT batch file takes the floppy drive as an argument)
- Read the Documentation carefully. There is a lot of it. You may find that you have to change the default directories in the .PRJ files. You may also have to make the directory path something like "C:\TC\UNCLUDE" so that the current directory is checked first.

Mr Cursor

HE'S AFRAID OF HIS PC

REGULAR READERS of this column (i.e. any of you who read last month's first issue and actually made it to the last page) may remember that I promised, this month, to bring you Mr Cursor's definitive guide to hard drives: meaning that I was going to tell you how I thought they probably worked. Well, my timing, as it turns out, is perfect – because guess what I tried to do last night... I tried to format my hard drive, which had been playing up for ages and was literally a minefield of sector errors. (Installing a game of anything over 3 megs had become an extremely tense affair... I understand now how American soldiers must have felt in Vietnam as they crept gingerly along jungle paths deep within VC territory). Anyway, so I eventually plucked up the courage to format. "Don't worry," I'd been told, "It's all very simple – even you could do it". But I know life doesn't work like that. And it didn't. The format failed. The on-screen format countdown reached 38% complete, at which point the whole system locked up. Aaaargh! My PC, my PC. It's like having a dead body in the corner of the room. I'm convinced the police are going to come knocking at any moment – I've even considered cutting the computer up into little pieces and flushing it down the toilet, but I know that the clanking pipes will alert the neighbours and I'll end up sharing a cell with Dennis Neilson. But to get back to the point of this month's column: how a hard drive probably works... and as you can imagine, I've been thinking about this in-depth.

A) A black hole.

B) The event horizon... anything passing this point (including fingers, so be careful when tampering) is sucked into another dimension, where it is 'altered' by aliens and then sent back, via hyperspace, to the monitor.

C) Program molecules from a game disk.

So there you have it. How a PC probably works. I know it's a bit 'vague', but that's always the way with such things... after all, probing the mysteries of such a system too deeply could result in the explorer being caught in a mind loop: and I wasn't going to risk that, as I'm sure you'll understand. ☒

Mr Cursor's Flow Of Consciousness Bit

Games packaging. Some companies get it right and some companies get it wrong. I think a few diagrams should illustrate my point here, so let's go...

1 Once upon a time I had a sensible pile of games boxes. Compact and manageable, the pile could be moved about by simply pushing at any point on the side. Furthermore, the top of the pile was flat – a mini tabletop if you like: on this reclaimed space, I could place items, such as ashtrays, blank disks, coffee mugs, letters from the bank, dead birds etc. Most useful.

2 Then I bought a copy of Jetfighter 2.

3 And then I got hold of a copy of Comanche.

ROLE PLAY FOR PC

The Legend of Darkmoon continues

The famous role model for all AD&D® role-playing fantasies, the dreaded Temple Darkmoon is back.

More sinister, terrifying and haunting than ever. It will slowly weave into your sub-conscious and refuse to let go.

Through a clearing in the shadowy forest, a trio of towers rise menacingly into the night sky. You are on the threshold of terror, one wrong move and it's curtains. Finito.

The exciting sequel to Eye of the Beholder is here. Bigger. Better. And so realistic you'll keep looking over your shoulder.

The improved "point 'n' click" interface lets you come face-to-face with the most gruesome characters and complex clues.

In fact, you'll only want to stop playing this State-of-the-Art adventure game for one reason. To pinch yourself and prove you're not in the middle of a nightmare.

Available on: PC (EGA, VGA/ MCGA (256 Colour). 640k RAM and Hard disk required. Supports AdLib™, Soundblaster™ and compatibles). Amiga version coming soon.

LAUGHS FOR PC

Side-splitting pirate adventure

Just when you thought it was the end for LeChuck, he's back.

The legend states that "when LeChuck wants you dead, you're dead"- grim news for his old adversary, young Guybrush Threepwood.

But fear not. Big Whoop holds the key to great power. All is not lost.

In this stunning graphic sequel, young Guybrush's adventures will have you rolling in hysterics. Beware, you'll laugh so hard, milk will flow from your nose.

Behind every pirate is a really gnarly chair and in front of Guybrush is a saga so savage it'll put hairs on your chest.

With 256 colours (PC version), variable difficulty modes, interactive reggae music and "point 'n' click" interface, you'll be transported to Monkey Island in a flash.

So, brace yourself, the fun starts here. Who knows when it will stop?

Available on: Amiga (32 colours) and PC (VGA/ MCGA). Requires 640k Ram AT or compatible. Supports AdLib™, Roland™, Soundblaster™ and SoundMaster™II sound cards. Hard drive required.
